EUROPE SHAKEN AS GOVERNMENTS FALL IN FRANCE & GERMANY

NO ROOM FOR CHINA TO COMPROMISE CALL FOR PATRIOTISM BY MARSHAL TUAN GOOD PROGRESS AT GENEVA

SHANGHAI, YESTERDAY.
"THERE IS NO ROOM FOR COMPROMISE. CHINA IS UN-ABLE TO START NEGOTIATIONS WITH JAPAN UNLESS MANCHURIA IS RESTORED." THIS DECLARATION WAS MADE BY MARSHAL TUAN CHI-JUI IN AN EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW WITH REUTER THIS MORNING.

"At this time, when the nation is in an unprecedented crisis, every Chinese citizen's duty is to protect the country against aggression, and it is necessary to abandon differences of opinion when the country is at stake."

With reference to the purpose
of his visit to Nanking, Marshal Tuan declared he had no special purpose and that there was no special political significance attached to his visit.

The reason for his seeing General Chiang Kai-shek was that he was his former student, although in his capacity of private citizen he has contributed his view regarding the existing situation. "But what I did was to contribute. Whether it will be accepted is the Government's business."

The Marshal categorically denied the current reports that he specially made the trip to Nanking to offer advice on the anti-Japanese campaign and that he favoured direct Sino-Japanese negotiations.

"All such reports are unfounded. They are pure Japanese press fabrications, aiming at misleading the public," he said. — Reuter.

Anglo-Japanese Talk In Tokyo.

Tokyo, Yesterday.
The British Ambassador, Sir
Francis Lindley, visited Count Uchida this evening for the purpose of discussing League
questions regarding the Shanghai situation and other matters.

Details of the discussion are not available. — Reuter.

Quiet Anniversary In Shanghai.

Shanghai, Yesterday.
Apart from commemorative meetings at which patriotic addresses were delivered, the first anniversary of the Shanghai "War" passed off quietly.
With the city be-flagged for the New Year and crowds in the streets in holiday mood, a striking contrast was provided with the atmosphere of a year ago when the events leading up to the Sino-Japanese clash were gathering momentum minute by minute.

It was on the evening of January 28 last year, that Admiral Shirayama issued his now historic statement saying that the Japanese naval forces intended to occupy Shanghai, but events were to prove that this task would take not one night but five weeks, and would require an army of 50,000
men. — Reuter.

Soviet Resents Japan's Policy.

Moscow, Yesterday.
It is understood from Soviet sources that the Government is increasingly resentful of the Japanese policy, on account of frequent allegations that the Soviet Government is forming a secret alliance with China against Japan.

Well-informed circles declare that Japan is persisting in this policy in spite of protests from the Government.

Furthermore, Soviet officials regard as extremely unfair, the statement made by the Japanese War Minister in the Upper House of the Diet that Japan will build an air force equal to the Russians, because
M. Stalin's recent speech foreshadowed the possibility of hostilities with Japan. — Reuter.

First Three Parts Of Report Drafted.

Geneva, Jan. 27.
Good progress was made
this morning at the meeting of the Committee of Nine,
which re-assembled at 6 o'clock this evening to continue its discussions.

THE SUSCEPTIBLE EAST.

British Fair Posters Withdrawn.

(Reuter's Special Service.)
London, Yesterday.
The poster advertising the forthcoming British Industries Fair has been withdrawn from circulation in Egypt, Turkey and Syria owing to representations that it might offend
Eastern susceptibilities.

It pictures Britannia beckoning the world to the Fair and has already been sent everywhere abroad. A Fair official explained that certain authorities of Oriental mentality considered that a picture of a woman acting in what super-sensitive Eastern minds might construe as less than perfect modesty, might not be the best advertisement by the Fair in Eastern lands.

"Good Night Vienna"

Taxi-Drivers Go Out On Strike.

(Reuter's Special Service.)
Vienna, Yesterday.
Hundreds of taxis are blockading the main streets
of Vienna and all traffic is held up owing to the taxi-drivers' protest strike.
The police declare that they will clear the streets themselves
if the taxi-drivers do not move their vehicles.

DE VALERA MAY CREATE A REPUBLIC

Ulster May Be Invited To Sit In Dail.

SPECULATION ON "REBEL'S" ELECTION VICTORY.

Dublin, Yesterday.
With 18 results yet to be declared, President Eamon De Valera needs only one more seat to have a majority over all parties in the new Irish Dail.

Latest reports show that Fianna Fail candidates have secured 68 seats against the Nationalist Party's 41. This relative strength is not expected to be materially altered.

With Mr. De Valera's return assured, speculation is rife as to the move he will make regarding the Oath of Allegiance. Considerable anxiety is felt in British official circles as it is considered almost certain that he will abolish the Oath and possibly force a complete split with Great Britain.

Ireland is also anxiously speculating as to what use he will make of his majority. The partition question is on all lips.

Some say that Mr. De Valera will ask the Nationalist members of the Ulster Parliament to sit in the Dail
while people in the country districts believe that the Fianna Fail will have a complete split with Britain
by declaring a Republic.

The other half of the community
hope that Mr. De Valera's success will induce him to maintain the tendency towards caution which he has recently exhibited.

The state of the Parties at 2 a.m.
yesterday was:—

Fianna Fail	68
Nationalists	41
Centre Party	10
Independents	8
Labour	7
Independent Labour	1
Eighteen results are not yet announced.

The position of the parties at the dissolution was: Fianna Fail, 70;
Labour, 7; total De Valera vote 77;
Cumann Na Ngachdheal 54; Independent Labour, 2; total Cosgrave, 71.
Four seats were vacant pending
by-elections.

The polling at the Irish General Election reached record figures, and although there were no serious disorder, the police had to maintain a strict watch at the polling booths to prevent persuasion. Several minor clashes occurred, however, at Cork and Dublin, owing to this action and in one instance the militia had to be called in to quell
a hostile crowd. Thirty arrests were made.

Mr. De Valera headed the returns
throughout the election, and although at times the fortunes of his party fluctuated, the ultimate out-

De Valera's Policy Now Fixed.

Fianna Fail	68
Nationalists	43
Centre Party	11
Independents	8
Independent Labour	1

Mr. De Valera in a message to his Party organ, declares that a National Policy has now been definitely determined, and he appeals to all citizens for goodwill to cooperate in the task of restoring the country to its former greatness.
"Making it a happy and worthy home for all our people." — Reuter.

18 EXTREMISTS ARRESTED IN SPAIN.

Police Check Plan For Rising In Andalusia.

(Reuter's Special Service.)

Seville, Yesterday.
The police have arrested 18 extremists at a secret meeting
where, it is alleged, a rising throughout Andalusia was being prepared.
Arms are now being deposited at police headquarters to avoid penalties for concealment.

FORD MOTOR PLANT TO RE-OPEN

Body Builders Wage Dispute Settled.

(Reuter's Special Service.)

Detroit, Yesterday.
It is expected that work
will resume at the Ford Motor Plant on Monday and at the Briggs Manufacturing Company today as the result of an offer of higher wages to Messrs. Briggs' employees. — Reuter.

The Ford Motor Company announced the indefinite closing down
of its factories in the United States on Thursday, thus throwing out of employment, 100,000 workers.

The recent walk-out of 6,000
body-workers from the Briggs Company was given as the reason for the drastic step. The trouble arose out of a wage reduction.

ARGENTINE MISSION TO BRITAIN

His Majesty To Welcome Delegation.

(Reuter's Special Service.)

H.M. the King and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales will participate in entertaining the official Mission from the Argentine Government, headed by the Vice-President of the Republic, Doctor Julio Roca, which will arrive in London on February 7 to return
the visit paid by the Prince of Wales to the Argentine in 1931,
and to discuss important commercial questions at issue between the two countries.

The Prince will meet the Mission on their arrival on behalf of the King, who will give them an audience and invite them to luncheon at Buckingham Palace.
The Prince will entertain them
at dinner at St. James Palace.
The Government and the City Corporation will also entertain the Mission.

GERMAN CABINET RESIGNS

Gen. Von Schleicher's Short Term in Office.

HINDENBURG ASKS VON PAPPEN TO REPORT.

Berlin, Yesterday.

The German Cabinet have resigned and President Von Hindenburg has accepted the resignation.

He has, however, requested Herr Von Pappen to sound the political parties and to report on the possibilities of forming a Government
on a board Parliamentary basis.

It is understood that President
Hindenburg requested Chancellor
Von Schleicher to confront the Reichstag, submit a policy and await further developments.

General Von Schleicher was unwilling to comply and obtained permission to discuss the situation with his colleagues, with the result that the Cabinet decided to resign.
Victim of His Own Methods.
Berlin, Later.

The Von Schleicher Cabinet was the twentieth since Germany became a Republic and was in office for only 65 days, the shortest period since the days of the Bismarck Cabinet.
It is understood that President
Hindenburg requested Chancellor
Von Schleicher to confront the Reichstag, submit a policy and await
further developments.

The Press expresses a general opinion that General Von Schleicher
was a victim of the same methods
he employed against his predecessors.

He was responsible for the downfall of Herr Brüning and it is unlikely that Von Hindenburg could ever forget that he had to drop his friend Herr Von Pappen as a result of the attacks by Von Schleicher, behind the scenes. — Reuter.

FAMOUS CHINESE ARTIST HERE

the only Oriental member of the Royal Society of British Artists, out of a limited membership of 120, is at present in the Colony,
on a short visit from the North,
where he has been exhibiting at

During his stay here, Mr. Chiu

and is staying at Sir Robert's Peak residence.

Mr. Chiu, who has been exhibiting in the leading countries of the world, is leaving for Shanghai on February 1, on board the President Hoover. After an exhibition in the Northern city, he will leave for Europe and pass through the Colony again.

He has been visiting the Dutch East Indies and his present tour
is for the purpose of collecting studies of life in the East. These pictures will be exhibited in Europe and the United States.
Mr. Chiu has been exhibiting at the Royal Academy, Paris Salon and American Galleries
since 1925, and in 1930 held an exhibition at Claridge's Gallery, Mayfair, which was visited by H.M. the Queen.

Mr. Chiu, who is the holder of the Landseer Scholarship and the Turner Prize, and many other scholarships which he has won

DOWNFALL CAUSED BY TAX PROPOSALS

SPLIT BETWEEN EXTREME WINGS IN BONCOUR CABINET

Paris, Yesterday.
THE French Government have been defeated by 330 votes to 193, and are resigning. — Reuter.

The defeat of the French Government occurred after an all-night sitting on the question of increasing direct taxation by 5 per cent., a motion which had already been turned down by the Finance Commission.

The Premier, M. Paul Boncour, aware of the danger, made it a question of confidence and gave the Left Majority the alternative of accepting the mainlines of the Government's plan of which this article was the corner-stone or turning out the Government.

M. Herriot, a former Premier, declared that the Radicals would vote for the Government in order to save the Republic, but M.
Blum announced that the Socialists could not support the Government on this point as it meant the sacrifice of the Socialist principles. — Reuter.

The French Government
drove to the Elysee at 7 a.m.
and handed in their resignations to President Lebrun, who asked them to carry out the current business pending the formation of a new Cabinet.

M. De Ladiere, the Left Wing Radical, is anticipated as the next Premier, as with the Left Wing majority the Premier must be a Radical or a Socialist. The latter are not yet ready to take power. The former Premier, M. Chautemps is also mentioned as a probable successor, with M. Herriot as Minister for Foreign Affairs, or possibly
M. Herriot as Premier.

The debate was orderly and colourless until the vital moment was reached at 6 a.m. and the two previous votes of confidence were taken which the Government gained a majority of about 100 votes
on all the vital issues of the Cam-mission's Finance Bill. — Reuter.

Socialists Force Issue.

Paris, Later.
Another possible combination is a new Cabinet headed by the Left Party Senator.
The crisis occurred four days before the end of the month when the Treasury coffers will be empty and it will be impossible to raise money
in time.

The defeat is due to the split between the two wings of the Government's supporters, but when the Government ultimately refused to bend completely to the will of the Socialists, a split was inevitable. — Reuter.

Coffers Empty. PRESIDENT ANXIOUS FOR FINANCE LEGISLATION.

Paris, Later.
President Lebrun took the unusual course of consulting M. Paul Bon-cour, for 45 minutes after the other Ministers had left the Elysee, this morning in order to arrange for the sanctioning of a monthly vote on account for January 31, as the coffers are empty.

It is learned that this is constitionally possible as it comes under the heading of current affairs of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies can accomplish the necessary formalities in time even if the Ministry is not formed by January 31. — Reuter.

STRIKE THREAT IN DENMARK

150,000 Workers Refuse Wage Cuts.

(Reuter's Special Service.)

Copenhagen, Yesterday.
A lockout, involving 150,000 workers in all the most important industries in Denmark is due to begin on February 1 unless the Government intervenes in the interval.

The trouble has arisen out of the employers' demand for a 20 per cent. reduction in wage which the workers refused to accept.

LONDON TOPICS

From Our Own Correspondent

December 30.

It is difficult to credit the fact that Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch was seventy recently. A great part of his influence on the minds of undergraduates at Cambridge,
where he is King Edward VII.
Professor of English literature, is due to his seeming almost to belong to their own generation.

One well remembers the sensation he caused when he was first appointed to his chair. Instead of appearing in the nondescript sub-sue which is the usual donnish wear, "Q" walked down Trinity-street to his first lecture resplendent in silk hat, morning coat, and sponge-bag trousers. In his button-hole was a red carnation.

His rooms in Jesus College were open then—and no doubt still—at almost all hours to undergraduates, and one is not sure that they did not imbibe more enthusiasm for English letters in the talk that there went on than even the brilliant lectures afforded.

A Miniature Newspaper.

Lady Clinton, of Bleton, Devon, and Fettercairn House, Kincardineshire, who is leading an effort to raise £10,000 for the Devon Nursing Association, is producing a miniature newspaper.

The "copy" consists of cookery
recipes, and the contributors, headed by the Princess Marie Louise,
include the Duchess of Buccleuch,
the Countess Dowager of Airlie,
the Countess of Portsmouth, the Countess Fortescue and the Countess of Mount Edgcombe.

Lady Clinton has acted as editor, sub-editor, advertisement
and business manager of "The Cookery Chronicle" with such success that all circulation revenue
will be profit for the Association.

Sir Louis Greig's New Home.

Sir Louis Greig, who was appointed Deputy-Ranger of Richmond Park during last summer, is in the midst of moving into his new home, the Thatched House Lodge.

The Lodge is one of the Grace and Favour houses—that is, the houses that are occupied by "the grace and favour" of the King.
Sir Louis will pay a rent to the King for his new dwelling—as the park is a Royal one, and the King is the Ranger.

The Thatched House Lodge is in the most rural seclusion, and boasts a long line of distinguished occupants. The actual lodge from which the house derives its name is decorated with frescoes by Angelica Kaufman, who was a frequent visitor.

A Grinling Gibbons Find.

A work by Grinling Gibbons in Westminster Abbey has come to knowledge under remarkable circumstances.

Admiral George Churchill's tall monument in the nave south aisle has been there over 200 years, and there were some who, from the style, thought it to be by the carver whom Wren so much employed.
But evidence was lacking.

Gibbons mostly carved in wood,
but is known to have made some designs for tombs in stone.

In an elaborately extra-illustrated copy of Pennant's "London," which fetched £165 at Hodgson's sale rooms yesterday, were original drawings by Grinling Gibbons,
among them that for this Churchill monument.

At the back was a letter with his signature, dated June 1, 1710, giving the commission and the price.

The Lords and Speeding.

The House of Lords sounded much like a motor engineers' conference recently when mechanically minded peers contributed their ideas for preventing speeding by heavy transport.

Lord Buckmaster, a formidable advocate of the enforcement of road laws, began a debate in which Lord Halsbury suggested recording speedometers, which would presumably be a tell-tale against reckless drivers, and Lord Pon-sonby suggested governors to control engine speed.

One liked the deferential way in which Earl Howe, the famous racing motorist, "submitted" his views to peers of less mechanical experience.

Vaults' Search.

A recent morning's search of the vaults of the Houses of Parliament,
before the King arrives at the House of Lords, has long ceased to yield anything more untoward than the bumping of a Beefeater's head as he climbs a ladder or makes his way along a ventilation duct.

It was eighty years ago since there was an alarm. On Nov. 22, 1852, one of the Yeomen of the Guard came breathless to the Sergeant-at-Arms with the news that he had seen the ghost of Guy Fawkes over a barrel of gunpowder.

Everybody in the party was eager to investigate, and the frightened Beefeater was far from satisfied
when his companions found nothing.

Lord Lytton.

The Earl of Lytton, who has returned to London, is perhaps the most immaculate of all our ex-pro-Consuls.

During the four wearying sessions of the Council of the League, when he and his fellow-members of the Commission had to sit in straight-backed
and very lightly upholstered chairs
for hours on end, he never once changed in his demeanour, and when the session rose emerged as sprightly and spruce as ever.

Even in Manchuria he maintained the same poise, and his perfectly cut clothes were a source of tremendous admiration and respect
among the Chinese and Japanese when he was making his long investigations in Manchuria.

In the new State of Manchukuo surrounding elegance has not yet become a distinguishing feature of contemporary life.

"Matelaisée" Used For Original Cotton Evening Dress

Also Useful For Long-Sleeved Jackets

Mousquetaire In Favour

THE old-fashioned material which our grandmothers knew as "matelaisée" has been used as a most attractive evening gown in ivory white. Made with a perfectly plain bodice with rounded neck at the front and a deep U at the back and with a skirt which stands out in full godets, its only decoration, outside rhinestone buckle which fastens the narrow belt, is a big bow of the material, placed at the waistline at the back. This Victorian material can also be used for a long-sleeved jacket lined with velvet and with one wide black velvet revers, which is worn over an evening frock of black organza.

Mousquetaire.

The majority of the sleeves of the daytime frocks are of elbow or two-thirds length, though the long, rather tight mousquetaire is also in favour. There is a full, two-thirds length bishop sleeve which has rows of shirring or narrow tucks below the elbow, another is a bit longer and has vertical rows of fine tucks from the shoulder to just above the elbow and again from a little below the elbow to halfway to the wrist where they become a scanty frill. A full-gathered sleeve reaching just below the elbow has a wide, flat, turned-back cuff edged with a tiny pleating of the material. In a long, mousquetaire model the upper part is of the material of the frock and the lower, from elbow to wrist, of wrinkled velvet.

Velvet Jackets.

Little short-sleeved overblouses of dark velvet with a narrow belt of the same material with a wool skirt and a long-sleeved blouse of jersey or tricot in white or a bright colour. One effective costume consists of a frock or woollen crepe in horizontal stripes of green, beige, red and white with an overblouse of olive green velvet.

Velvet jackets with round neck

Novel Effect Gained By Dipping In Blue.

TWILLED cotton has the great advantage over most cheap materials for curtains in that it hangs well and densely enough without the added expense and trouble of lining. Also it is to be had in a width sufficiently broad for large windows with the correct folds," writes a Singapore Free Press Fashion Correspondent. The only weakness is that the colours in which it may be bought, apart from the white variety, are apt to be uninteresting and poor.

One of the most original and successful pairs of curtains I have ever seen, however, were made from Bolton sheeting which had been bought white and dipped in ordinary blue water of the kind used for laundry work. These hung in an ivory-coloured room and were evidently blue in blurred strips which were extraordinarily effective. The solution of blue must have been a strong one, but, of course, a pale or medium shade could as easily be obtained.

The point, as I gathered, was to squeeze the material, after and to hang the curtains up wet and dripping it in the solution, as possible, so that the colour could run itself into natural streaks. Adequate protection for the floor during the drying process was provided by thick wads of newspaper, which were renewed when necessary. The cutting, hemming, and affixing of rings were done beforehand. In the case I saw the result was a blending of light and dark blues that looked equally well in natural and artificial light, as also from inside and outside the house. With a good fire, and the windows and doors open, the drying took place easily in an afternoon.

The same could be done for bed covers or for the covering of upholstered furniture, but care must be taken that the sheeting is not allowed to hang across a line.

IN THE EVENING

SMALL caplets are still well liked, and a clever woman can have as many as she chooses to make to wear with one gown. One is a novel cape made of tatan ring velvet, the predominating colour in which is red. It goes on a gown of thick white crinkled crepe, which has a narrow belt of the velvet.

Another style is a waist-length cape of gauged brown crepe de chine over a frock of gold chiffon. Then there is also a hug-me-tight cape of black crinkled velvet, another of topaz and gold brocade, and a fachu of the same chiffon as the frock—all of which can wear in turn over the gown.

Cheerful New Cloth

LITTLE tweed frocks with collars and cuffs always appeal, but a three-piece suit of the new Baskella cloth in a bright, cheerful colour will be a joy.

One seen had plain skirt except for an inverted pleat in the centre of the back, at the front and one at each side. The waistband of the skirt was shaped up to a point in front and at the back and buttoned on to a blouse or tuck-in jumper of the new woollen striped pique of mixed colours.

Over the blouse was a waist-length coat and the collar of the blouse was worn outside the coat. Corduroy velveteen is very popular again and is ideal for children, as it is so hard-wearing and washable.

The loveliest colours can be obtained in this fabric.

Another advantage is that it requires no decoration.

For a winter coat it is excellent if it is made with an interlining. This material also lends itself specially to magyap styles and is easy to fit high up close to the throat with a small turn-down collar. A cape-collar is another idea.

Three buttons at the top and perhaps a narrow band of fur edging the collar and cuffs is all the trimming necessary.

If you set your waves yourself, of course you will need, in addition to these fundamental accessories, pins, combs, a net cap and other gadgets that go with the wave.

Cape Sleeves

SOME of the most charming evening gowns of the moment are made not only in two colours, but of two different materials.

Crepe satin and velvet are seen together, one designer having made a frock of soft blue velvet, with an over-dress of white crepe satin. The draped overdress shows a little of the velvet bodice, and the skirt part is left open in front to reveal the velvet-under-skirt. The lines are very slim and smooth, and the bodice is fitted closely to the figure.

An unusual combination is velvet and tulle, yet it is very successful. A deep purplish-blue velvet gown has the most youthful pleated ruffles of crisp tulle attached at the shoulders with small trails of tiny flat pink flowers.

Lace Curtains

FRAGILE lace curtains should never be rubbed or the threads will soon break and the curtains wear out quickly in consequence. The best method is to fill a large milk or wine bottle with soapy lukewarm water. Push the curtain through the neck of the bottle, and, with one hand over the opening, shakes the bottle briskly for some minutes. Repeat this process until the curtain is clean. Washed in this manner, the lace cannot possibly tarnish. If the lace is coffee-coloured it should be passed through a rinsing water consisting of weak or strong coffee, according to the shade required. Roll it up in a towel and iron with a fairly hot iron after about an hour. The lace should be ironed fairly damp as it will then come up the right stiffness without stretching.

Scent Bags For Linen

FULL small silk bags with mixtures of any of these sweet-smelling substances: powdered cloves, mace, nutmeg, cinnamon, mint, balm, southern-wood, ground-ivy, laurel, sweet marjoram, rosemary, lavender, cassia, juniper, sandal-wood, rosewood, roots of angelica, orris.

A scent to prevent moths from injuring clothes is made from equal quantities of powdered cloves, caraway-seeds, nutmeg, mace, cinnamon, and Tonquin beans, and of orris-root as much as will equal the other ingredients put together. Pound well and put the powder into silk bags.

Make Lavender powder with half a pound of lavender flowers, half an ounce of dried thyme and mint, a quarter of an ounce of ground cloves and caraways, one ounce of dried common salt. Pound all to a powder, and put into cambric bags.

S'HAI SOCCER TEAM LOSE: MANILA WIN: COLONY RUGBY TRIUMPH

*Combined Chinese
Win By 5 to 2*

Inside Trio Rattle Visitors' Defence

ROUGH PLAY MARS GAME

THREE GOALS IN FIVE MINUTES IN SECOND HALF.

THE COMBINED CHINESE SOCCER ELEVEN ACHIEVED WHAT THE HONG KONG INTERPORT SIDE FAILED TO DO WHEN THEY DEFEATED THE SHANGHAI TEAM BY 5 GOALS TO 2 ON THE CLUB GROUND YESTERDAY.

THOUGH THEY LED BY ONLY ONE GOAL AT THE INTERVAL, THE LOCAL SIDE SHOWED A DEFINITE SUPERIORITY THROUGHOUT THE GAME.

THE INTRODUCTION OF TAM KONG-PAK, FUNG KING CHEONG AND IP PAK WA PAVED THE WAY TO SUCCESS. FOR, IN ADDITION TO SHARING THE GOALS, THIS TRIO PROVED A CONTINUAL DANGER TO THE VISITORS' DEFENCE. THE HALF-BACK LINE ALSO PLAYED BRILLIANT FOOTBALL, LAM YUK-YING COMPLETELY BOTTLING UP COLLET, THE SHANGHAI LEADER.

THOUGH THE GAME WAS FULL OF THRILLS, ROUGH PLAY MARRED WHAT OTHERWISE MIGHT HAVE BEEN A VERY FINE EXHIBITION OF FOOTBALL, BOTH TEAMS BEING OFFENDERS.

A large gathering which included H.E. Sir William Peel, K.B.E., K.C.M.G., and Lady Peel, Major-General O. C. Borrett, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., C.B.E., Hon. Dr. H. R. Kotewall, C.M.G., LL.D., and Sir Showson Chow witnessed the defeat of Shanghai at the hands of the Combined Chinese.

As on Thursday the ground was packed, but for the benefit of those who could not attend the game a running commentary was broadcast.

Although it was very cold the spectators were given plenty of thrills throughout the game, which was packed with exciting moments at both ends of the field.

The Chinese were full value for their victory for they were much more quick on the ball than the Shanghai men, whose forwards did not combine so well as in the Interport on Thursday.

Man for man the defences were evenly matched, but those three dangerous inside forwards, Ip Pak-wa, Fung King-cheong and Lam Kong-pak, turned the scales in the Chinese favour. They shared the five goals between them, and their excellent understanding at times completely nonplussed Gash and his defenders.

The best football was witnessed about fifteen minutes after the interval when three goals were scored in less than five minutes. Both teams were then seen at their best. The standard of football during the rest of the game was patchy with the Chinese always having the upper hand. With the exception of Hay who came in for Remedios at right half, the Shanghai team was the same as that which triumphed over Hong Kong. The Chinese made two changes in their side, Chan Kwong-ku coming in at outside left instead of Mok So, and Tong Kwan taking the place of Li Tien-wing-chiu, who, although going on the field with the rest of the players, did not play.

BRILLIANT HALVES. Lim Thin-chan was his usual self in goal being covered by a splendid pair of backs in Li Ting-tang and Lau Mau, the latter playing with far better understanding than he did with Allan. The halves under the astute captaincy of Lam Yuk-ying thoroughly disorganised the Shanghai forwards, neither Keats nor Hughes ever getting the better of Tong Kwan and Chung Yin-chan, while Lam completely bottled up Collet.

The Shanghai leader never had a chance to swing out those long forward passes which were so successful against Hong Kong. It was the Chinese halves who paved the way to victory, for, although it took them some time to make their presence felt, they were prominent throughout.

Cheng Sui-hong gave an improved display against Vance being more at home with his partner Tam Kong-pak. The latter returned to local football after his enforced absence and showed all his former brilliancy, both his goals being real gems. He, however, was not so successful in the second half, when he was completely bottled up by the Chinese halves.

Combined Chinese Team To Visit Shanghai Shortly

The visit of a Combined Chinese football team to Shanghai during the latter part of May or at the beginning of June was intimated last night by Mr. Mok Ying-kwai, Chairman of the Hong Kong Chinese Amateur Athletic Federation, at a dinner given in honour of the Shanghai Interport football team at the Chinese Merchants' Guild, China Building.

Mr. Mok Ying-kwai presided, and among those present were Dr. S. W. Tao, Unofficial Member of the Legislative Council and an Honorary President of the Federation, Mr. Chu Koung-wa, Mr. Wong Kam-ying, Mr. Mok Hing (Football Secretary for the Federation), Mr. Ho Yun-kwong, the South China Athletic Association representative, Mr. S. Strange, Mr. Pardo, captain of the Hong Kong Interport team, Sen, the Colony outside left, Mr. G. T. May, secretary of the Hong Kong Football Association, and members of the Press. Mr. Mok said this was the first opportunity the Federation had of entertaining any Shanghai Interport football team, and he hoped that it would not be the last. Mr. Mok said that the Federation had already granted permission for a Combined Chinese team to be sent to Shanghai early this year. The team would in all probability leave at the end of May or at the beginning of June. He hoped that when the two teams met again the Chinese would be able to repeat their splendid performance. (Applause).

M.C.C. BEAT

Bradman 71: Hammond
6 For 43.

FEEBLE ENGLISH BATTING.

Sydney, Yesterday. Splendid bowling by "Wally" Hammond, the Gloucestershire all-rounder, was responsible for the M.C.C. victory over New South Wales by 4 wickets here to-day.

The sensational collapses of both teams on Friday were repeated again to-day. New South Wales who commenced play to-day with 36 for 1 on the board, were 119 for 5 at lunch and all out for 123. The M.C.C. fared little better in their attempt to score 110 runs for victory, losing 6 wickets before the required runs were knocked off.

There was additional rain overnight and Hammond exploited a spot on the tricky wicket to such a degree that he took all three wickets which fell before lunch. Don Bradman was the only batsman to face him confidently, and was undefeated at the luncheon interval with 68 to his credit. Hammond had then taken 4 for 37.

A crowd of 15,000 saw the home side's tail-enders completely demolished on a soft wicket after lunch. Bradman added only three runs, his 71, scored in 120 minutes, being featured by characteristic driving and well-placed shots which yielded six boundaries.

The last four wickets added only 9 runs. Verity taking 2 for 26, and Hammond returning the final figures of 6 for 43.

The M.C.C. batting was most disappointing. It was very feeble considering the wicket was a typical English one. Chivers, the slow bowler who caused the English collapse in the first innings, was again among the wickets, taking 3 for 23. Leyland (33), Hammond (24), Tate (26 not out) and F. R. Brown (12 not out) were the only batsmen to reach double figures.

Scores as cable by Reuter were as follows:
N.S.W.: 189 (Brown 69, Rowe 70, Bradman 71, Fingleton 19, Mitchell 3 for 32, Hammond 3 for 22, Verity 2 for 9).
M.C.C.: 109 (Patuadi 2, Hammond 7, Wyatt 63, Verity 33, Leyland 29, Brown 29, Chivers 5 for 73, Hill 3 for 29, Howell 2 for 40).

N.S.W.: 128 (Bradman 71, Verity 2 for 26, Hammond 6 for 43).
M.C.C.: 110 for 6 (Wyatt 3, Patuadi 1, Leyland 33, Hammond 24, Tate 26 not out, Chivers 3 for 29).

marked his display by coming under the eye of the referee, who finally cautioned him.

Fung King-cheong played a great game as leader of the attack, and the way he passed the ball out to his wingers was perfect. Ip Pak-wa did his work quietly, but well. The main fault with the three inside forwards lay in too much close-passing in front of goal, which invariably ended in Turner or Voong robbing them of the ball.

Chan Kwong-tu had a field day. He was much too fast for Hay and Voong, and sent across some glorious centres.

Bradley gave a good display in the Shanghai goal having no chance with any of the shots that beat him, although he hesitated slightly when Ip cut through in the closing minutes and could only just manage to touch the ball as Ip shot.

Turner was slightly the better of the two backs. He made some wonderful clearances, but he and Voong experienced a trying time in attempting the passing of the speedy Chinese trio, and were often left bewildered by the speed and accuracy of the opposing vineyard.

HAY WORTHY RESERVE. Gash was prominent throughout, often breaking up the Chinese attacks and keeping his forwards on SHANGHAI ECLIPSED.

Manila won all three four-balls matches against Shanghai in the Triangular Interport Golf encounter at Fanling yesterday afternoon.

The feature of the afternoon's play was the remarkably good long driving of J. Mason, Jr. His good performance was the reason for the heavy defeat of W. H. G. Huggett and T. S. M. Terrance by Mason, partnered by his father, J. H. Mason, captain of the Manila team. The pair had a best ball of 71, the leading score of the day.

Putting has been the weakness in all the matches. The temperature, on starting out yesterday was 26 degrees, and this in some measure handicapped the players on the greens. The ground, however, was in good condition.

Eighteen holes were played on the old course in the morning, while the remaining 18 holes were played over the new course in the afternoon.

Hong Kong, who have defeated Manila by 6 matches to 3, are expected to beat Shanghai to-morrow. They have won their three four-ball matches and are expected to win at least three of the six singles matches which have yet to be played.

Manila should be able to annex two of the six singles matches against Shanghai and thus secure second place in the Triangular Interport. Shanghai's failure has provided a big surprise.

The results of yesterday's matches between Shanghai and Manila were as follows:

Capt. Ednie and A. Gibbs (Manila) beat J. W. Harrison and D. Ward Smith (Shanghai) 2 and 1.
J. R. H. Mason and J. Mason, Jr., (Manila) beat W. H. G. Huggett and T. S. M. Terrance (Shanghai) 5 and 4.
N. S. Watterspoon and J. R. MacFie (Manila) beat P. V. Prevot and G. A. Bonham (Shanghai) 4 and 3.

Melbourne, Yesterday. Keith Gledhill defeated Vivian McGrath in a surprising manner in the semi-final round of the Australian Lawn Tennis Championship here to-day. He won in straight sets against the conqueror of Ellsworth Vines, and will now meet Jack Crawford in the Final.

McGrath, the Australian prodigy, disappointed his many supporters by playing very mediocre tennis to lose by 6-4, 6-1, 6-1. On Thursday he played dazzling tennis, to eliminate Ellsworth Vines, ranking No. 1 player in the world, by scores of 6-2, 6-6, 8-6, 7-5 in the quarter-finals. The seventeen-year-old player then seemed certain to meet Crawford in the Final, as Gledhill is considered a better doubles player than a singles exponent.

Gledhill is expected to provide Crawford with his first major title of the year. The following were the results of the Semi-finals in the Doubles: Jack Crawford and A. Moon (Australia) beat Wilmar Allison and John Van Ryn (U.S.A.) 10-8, 6-3, 6-4.

Ellsworth Vines and Keith Gledhill (U.S.A.) beat Cummings and Hassett (Australia) 6-2, 6-3, 7-5.

MARKED SUPERIORITY

Shanghai, Yesterday.

THE Hong Kong Rugby team concluded their triumphant visit to Shanghai to-day when they convincingly beat the formidable U.S. Marines by two goals and two tries (16 pts.) to a try (3 pts.), after leading by 5 pts. at the interval.

On Thursday the Colony team defeated Shanghai in the Interport game by 16 pts. to 5.

A large crowd was present when the game between Hong Kong and the Marines commenced this afternoon in sunny weather.

The game, however, proved colourless and disappointing, the Colony players showing a marked superiority which placed the issue beyond all doubt.

Play, however, opened in a sensational manner, for within three minutes of the kick-off G. P. LAMMERT, the left wing-three-quarter, showed a fine burst of speed to touch down in the corner. D. McLellan added the goal points from a difficult angle to give Hong Kong a five points lead.

This concluded the scoring in the first half, though the Colony backs went very close on several occasions.

M. W. TURNER, the stand off half, crossed over for an unconverted try on the resumption, and J. P. WHITHAM, who was playing centre three-quarter instead of full-back, added three more points.

The closing minutes were packed with incident. J. A. R. SELBY, the Colony skipper and scrum half, touched down between the posts after a pick up in the loose. McLellan converted the effort to give the Colony a clear lead of 16 points.

The Marines rallied, and a minute before time their captain, Flusser, broke through for an unconverted try.

The outstanding Colony players were Lammert, Whitham and Selby.—Reuter.

Navy Beat Borderers By 18 to 6 at Rugby

The Navy rugby fifteen defeated the South Wales Borderers by three goals and a try (18 points) to two tries (6 points) yesterday, at Soekunpoo in a friendly fixture.

The Navy were superior in all departments. At forward both packs were evenly matched, though the Navy were the slightly heavier pack on a slippery surface.

Walker opened the scoring for the Borderers in the first half with an unconverted try in the corner. The Navy retaliated and soon afterwards placed the scores level through Barnes, who scored near the posts. Lt. Buckley added the goal points to give the Navy the lead.

In the second half the Navy exhibited superiority in all departments and tackled determinedly, preventing the Borderers from opening up the game. Midway through this half Ryder cut through to score near the posts. Lt. Buckley again added the major points to give the Navy a seven points lead.

The Borderers strove hard to get over, and succeeded finally when Whelan picked up in the loose to go over for an unconverted try.

From this period the Navy were all over the Borderers, adding two more tries through Hubback and Barnes. Buckley converted the former effort to make the final score 18 points to 6 in favour of the Navy.

the move with well-timed passes. Hay showed up well, especially in his head work which was an outstanding feature of the game. He proved himself a worthy substitute for Remedios. Vance did some splendid work in keeping his wing on the move, but he found Tam and Cheng a little too much for him. The Shanghai forwards were too well watched to settle down to their long passing game. Hughes played well up to a point, but he found Li Tin-sang too good for him. Kents was much better, he and Jack being easily the most dangerous wing. Jack again played splendidly using a good body swerve to advantage, and he often went close without having any luck near goal. Collet was a marked man and Lam Yuk-ying kept close to him throughout, with the result that he never had a chance, although he often initiated dangerous movements. Chen showed splendid ball control. He played as an extra half, but was always prepared to have a snap shot at goal.

BRADLEY TROUBLED EARLY.

The Combined Chinese won the toss, and Shanghai took up the running, but a splendid pass out to the left by Kents was overrun by Hughes. Good combination by Jack and Kents resulted in Kents shooting behind. The Chinese right wing then attacked, but Turner was prominent with timely clearances. Ip put in some good work, but his parting shot went wide. Play now developed into an end to end struggle. Lau Mau cleared luckily when Jack and Collet, working too closely, bungled a good opportunity to open the score. The Chinese forwards combined well, and Gash was applauded for fine defensive play. The first real shot of the match came from Fung, who caused Bradley to go full length to bring off a spectacular save. A minute later Fung passed to Chan but the latter's shot was again well saved by Bradley.

Two corners proved of no avail to Shanghai, but Lim was forced to bring off a good save from a free kick taken by Gash. Play was then transferred to the other end where Chan made a great run down the wing. He centred beautifully for Ip and Cheng to collide when presented with an open goal. Ip had to leave the field for treatment as the result.

Cheng was slow on the wing and spoiled many good chances. The game at this period was held up very frequently for petty fouls, Tam being finally cautioned.

Gash, Vance and Jack were prominent with clever play, and as a result Jack and Collet were again through but Li Tin-sang made a great clearance. Lim, however, was well tested by Hay. At the other end Fung shot wide after too much close-passing, and then Collet was sent through by Hughes, but he lost the ball through dallying. Hughes mis-kicked when given a good chance, and Chen just failed with a great shot when awkward circumstances. Bradley made a lucky save when Ip's shot was diverted by a defender, and after 35 minutes play the Chinese deservedly took the lead. TAM evaded Turner and beat Bradley with a great shot. Encouraged by their success the Chinese attacked repeatedly. Chen sent across some great centres which were, however, well cleared by Gash, Turner and Voong. A thrill at the other end came when Chen sent in a great shot which flashed past the upright with Lim well beaten.

Half Time:—

Combined Chinese .. 1
Shanghai .. 0
Shanghai opened the second half strongly, and play was confined to the Chinese half. Jack mis-kicked when close in, and Lim saved shots from Collet, Chen and Jack.

The Chinese goal had a marvellous escape when Kents had the goal at his mercy, but his shot hit the crossbar. Chen hit the undermouth part of the bar on the rebound. Shanghai continued to enjoy most of the play, and the whole of the Chinese team concentrated on defence, Tam heading the ball out again and again. The Chinese eventually took the ball down to the other end, and a mistake in the defence let in FUNG who beat Bradley with a fast rising shot. Chen tried to go through on his own from the kick off, and his shot just missed by inches.

Then came an exhilarating five minutes in which three goals were scored. Vance passed to Chen whose shot was blocked by a defender. The ball went out to COLLET, who netted for Shanghai with a high shot. After TAM had failed to gather when close in, a good passing movement left him clear with the ball, and he had no difficulty in making the score 3-1. A minute later, however, Collet sent out a great pass to Kents, who evaded Leung and sent across a perfect centre for CHEN to head the ball into the net to make the scores 2-3.

Kents went through again, but mis-kicked on the line when centring, and Hughes spoiled a good chance through being too slow. In an attack by the Chinese Bradley was kicked in the head, but he resumed after the use of sticking plaster. Shanghai made a determined effort to equalise and only great defensive play by Li, Lau and Tam kept them out.

FIRE EXTINGUISHED.

A mild diversion was caused at this stage of the game through a small outbreak of fire in the centre of the uncovered stand. It was, however, extinguished by an Indian, who unconcernedly crossed the field of play with a bucket and a watering can. Fortunately the ball was at the other end of the ground at the time.

Collet was cautioned for rough play. Shanghai, however, continued to press, and Hay sent in a great shot, which was only partially saved by Lim, the ball being finally scrambled away. Bradley made a good save from Fung, and then, with five minutes to go, the Chinese added two further goals. A mistake in the defence let Chan take the ball down on the left, and from his centre FUNG scored with a great drive. Bradley affected a wonderful save from Tam, and then Cheng went away, and, with the defence spreadeagled, IP gained possession. He caught Bradley in two minds and had little difficulty in netting.

The closing minutes were marked by rough play by both sides.

R.P.O. Darlington had charge of the following teams:—
Shanghai: Bradley; Voong and Turner; Hay, Gash and Vance; Kents, Jack, Collet, K. C. Chen and Hughes.
Combined Chinese:—Lim Tin-chun; Lee Tin-sang and Lau Mau; Leung Yin-chun, Lam Yuk-ying and Tong Kwan; Cheng Sui-hong, Tam Kong-pak, Fung King-cheong, Ip Pak-wa and Chan Kwong-lu.

Third Division.

GREGORY SCORES FIVE BUT MISSES PENALTY.

At King's Park, the Royal Air Force proved far too superior to the Radio and won comfortably by 6 goals to 1.

Many opportunities were missed by the Airmen, who were inclined to play about with the ball, instead of opening up the game. At half time the Airmen led by three clear goals. Gregory, who claimed five of the goals, failed to convert a penalty, and Brimble brought the Airmen's total to six. A breakaway by the Radio resulted in Aycock netting.

SIGNALS CRACK UP IN SECOND HALF.

At Chatham Road, the Lincolns outplayed the Signals to win by 0 goals to 2.

In the first half the Signals enjoyed a fair share of the game and conceded only one goal, in that period, but they failed miserably in the latter half.

The Lincolns took their opportunities, and combined well. Their defence played a steady game and gave the Signals' forwards very little scope.

Goal-scoring for the Lincolns were Evans (2) Douma (2) and Clarke (2) while Convey and Brown replied for the Signals.

TAIKOO AGAIN HEAVILY DEFEATED.

At the Valley, the Taikoo team proved no match for the Saints and went under by eleven clear goals.

The game was too one-sided to be interesting. The Saints, though superior, played a listless game, and could have easily increased their score, but they preferred to dilly-dally. At half time the Saints led by five clear goals.

Scorers for the Saints were A. M. Omar (6) L. Castilho (2) Azim (1) and T. Castilho (1).

BOTELHO GIVES RECREIO SURPRISE POINT.

At Carolina Hill, the Recreio, though fielding only ten men, managed to hold South China to a draw. The South China players were the better team throughout, but they were very poor in their passing and shooting.

In the first half Lam Wing-kwong opened the scoring for South China, who held the lead until the closing stages when Botelho cut in and equalised with an oblique shot.

REFEREE FAILS TO APPEAR.

Athletic Prefer To Play
"Friendly."

The Third Division game between the Royal Engineers and the Chinese Athletic was cancelled but owing to the non-appearance of the referee. A Bluejacket offered his services, but the Chinese desired the game to be played as a "friendly."

The game was interesting in the first half, but fell play deteriorated in the second half. The Sappers eventually ran out winners by three goals to one after being held to one all at half time.

Scorers for the Engineers were Himbury, Sloan and Pegg while Tang Kwong-yun netted for the Chinese.

SECRETS OF IRELAND'S ARMY

Full Strength Of I.R.A. Revealed

Headquarters Situated In An Attic

BITTERNESS AGAINST BRITISHERS

THE methods which the Irish Republican Army adopt to avoid publicity are as intricate as those of a Chinese secret society.

So I found when I set out in the hope of discovering, from the fountain head, the exact nature, composition and disposition of the Army.

Four times I went to the Dail, the House of Commons of the Free State, in Kildare-street, Dublin.

I was kept waiting in an outer room while deputies, as the M.P.s of the Free State are called, telephoned to some mysterious personage who was declared to be "in the know" in I.R.A. affairs.

Deputies who were professedly members of the I.R.A. promised to do their best. But their best amounted to nothing. Although they quoted their leader, de Valera, as stating that the I.R.A. was no longer a secret organisation, and that its General Staff would welcome a fair investigation, my offer to conduct one was consistently turned down.

But at last, through the friendly offices of a member of the organisation, I achieved my desire.

Change Once A Week.

The actual Headquarters of the I.R.A. are changed about once a week. But my friend guided me to a building in a side street in Dublin, and, leaving me at the entrance, said:

"On the top floor you will see a small door, the door of a little attic room. In that room, if you are lucky, you will meet one of the most important men in the movement."

Five times I knocked at that door, to be told each time that the man I sought was in the country. But on the sixth attempt I was admitted. Conducted through an inner door, I found the man I had been trying to find for a fortnight, the virtual second-in-command of the I.R.A., sitting on the edge of the table, facing the door.

In a wooden partition just behind him were two peepholes commanding a view of the room. Brusquely he said: "Well! What do you want?"

I told him. He considered awhile; then, pointing to a chair, commanded rather than invited me to sit down. A man well used to the exercise of authority.

The Face Of A Fighter.

I studied him as I took the indicated seat. He was six feet tall, broad in proportion, with a mass of dark, curly hair, and the cold blue eyes and stern face of a fighter.

I knew his record. He was a fighting gunman in the 1916 Rebellion and one of the most intrepid Republican Army leaders in 1922.

Cosgrave put him in gaol, and he was living on bread and water in Mountjoy Prison when de Valera, as one of the first acts of his Presidency, released him and the other I.R.A. leaders—the political prisoners. After the difficulty I had experienced in getting in touch with this man, I expected him to be very reticent. On the contrary. He almost made speeches to me, and boasted volubly of the I.R.A.'s prowess and potentialities.

And what would be the use of explaining to the English people what we of the I.R.A. want?" he began, in a tone of bitter challenge. "You people think we are a collection of blackguards!"

His voice rose to a shout: "Why do you suppose that I went 'on the run' in 1916? Why do you think I have fought through the Civil War? Why have I been beaten up or in prison during the last five or six years? When I left Mountjoy Prison I had been starving on bread and water in solitary confinement; I was almost a skeleton. Do you think the scum of any country would endure all that?"

"I will tell you why," I, and thousands of men like me, have endured such torture and hardship. It is because we have one love—Ireland! I will give my life for Ireland—to-day, to-morrow—any time that the sacrifice of it will lead her to freedom!"

Patterned on British Army. After this characteristically passionate, characteristically fanatical prelude, he gave me more detailed information.

I was told what was the nominal strength of the I.R.A. to-day. It is between 30,000 and 40,000 men. But my informant claimed that a force of well over 100,000 men could be put into the field at 48 hours' notice.

He boasted, too, that the I.R.A. organisation is patterned on that of the British Army; but whereas it used to be divided into companies, battalions, brigades and divisions, the divisions have now been abolished.

This was done as the result of manoeuvres in which it was found that the maintenance of divisional headquarters acted as a brake on the efficiency of the machine.

"We found," I was told, "that we could go into action much quicker by sending our instructions straight to headquarters, and that every time we attempted to carry them out through divisional headquarters there was delay."

New Reserve of Officers.

To-day there are about 64 battalions of the I.R.A. In every Free State county there are at least two, the East and the West—the East Clare Battalion and the West Clare Battalion, the East Wicklow Battalion and the West Wicklow Battalion, and so on.

"There are also City Battalions in Cork and Limerick. In Dublin there are four battalions full strength."

A new Dublin Battalion has just been formed—the "Curates' Battalion," to which I referred in a previous article, which is composed of young shop assistants.

The I.R.A. has also just formed a reserve of officers.

"This reserve," said my informant at headquarters, "is intended to fill the gaps in the I.R.A. which, it is expected, will be caused by casualties when the first clashes with the new White Guard and the C.I.D. occur. It consists of men who served in 1916 and 1922."

Certainly, as I discovered later, the I.R.A. makes every effort to imitate British methods. Its leaders study eagerly the published training manuals of the British Army in the hope of adapting them to their own needs.

At present, they say, they are interested chiefly in anything which will help to make their forces more mobile. Guerrilla warfare is a practice which they will vehemently defend. "We must adopt the fighting methods of all small peoples," said an officer to me.

MODERN FAMILY FREEDOM

The Necessity For HappinessTrend Of Life In Social Science

THE VARYING CODE OF CLASS

THIS is a great period for the British family.

Through fifty years everybody
who wished to rank with the intellectuals has been abusing family life and domestic bliss.

For the last twenty-five of those years the favourite theme of carnest fiction and the serious stage has been a demonstration of what frightful things the British parent and the British home used to be till the rising generation broke loose in a grand revolution.

Now Sir William Beveridge comes into print to announce with the pontifical authority of social science that it is all a mistake.

Interesting and Happy.

There has been "no revolutionary change," no very great changes of any kind, and what there are are rather formal than real, and ordinary people still "find family life interesting as well as happy." This is very disheartening.

Here was Mr. Bernard Shaw telling the world, as Sir William Beveridge insists on reminding us, that family life "is no more natural to us than a cage is to a cockatoo"— which must be one of the most irrelevant analogies ever composed.

All the higher thought of the time was demonstrating to us that our country had hardly been saved from marital tyrannies and parental tyrannies by our revolting sons and daughters bursting forth to live an unattached or semidetached life of freedom.

I felt a thrill, a sense of importance in believing that these tremendous convulsions were all around me, that I was one of the last survivors of the age of the family. It is a sad shock to be told nothing in particular has happened
or is going to happen.

Sir William Beveridge has proved it by sociology. Some time ago he set out to discover what family life really is like by the aid of a set of questions on a form.

Inadequate Evidence.

The questions were many, and most of them were awkward. Sir William, as an expert, pronounces that the form could be filled up in two hours. It may be so. But you could also go on answering some of the questions for two weeks or two months. However having sent out 50,000 forms to people who asked for them, he has had 8,000 filled up.
The number gratifies him. But as there are some eight or nine million
families in Great Britain the evidence of 8,000 people might be thought inadequate to establish general rules about family life. Sir William scoffs at such a doubt.

It is apparently to social science
a "fantastic" suggestion that 8,000
people selected for their readiness to fill up forms—a most inhuman characteristic—should not be fairly representative of eight million.

If families were uniform as the objects of study in physical science,
and ruled as those are, only by physical causes, then a general principle might be deduced from observation of a small number of examples. But when we are dealing with human affairs nothing can be more unscientific than to infer from a few examples the common condition. It is the philosophy of the lad who thinks himself a man of the world.

Sir William Beveridge's notion of a science of society which can proceed and reach reliable results in the same way as the physical sciences is not a means to lighten
our darkness but a fond thing vainly imagined to delude us.

His candour as to the inadequacy of his evidence is admirable. Not only is the total number of his witnesses small, he tells us, but "the great bulk" of them come from one class, people of incomes between £300 and £800 a year.

I should be quite prepared to agree that no one section of the nation is more thoroughly representative of British thought and feeling but after all the habits and code of family life vary from class to class,
and the rules of what Sir William Beveridge calls "the middle economic grade" do not hold for classes which must be more numerous.

What Literature Shows.

So I fear the scoffers at the British family will not accept this sociological refutation "One gets hardly any accounts of unhappy families," says Sir William Beveridge, and that in itself should suggest to the most optimistic
sociologist that something had gone wrong with the witnesses. Either they are not typical, or the evidence they give is not of things as they are.

Let us try another kind of evidence, the evidence of literature.

It is not really possible to describe your own family life in answering questions on a form,
still less family life in general.
The truth of such things requires skill and space to tell.

Look back at the Victorian pictures of family life in biography and novel. Most of them, from the palace to the cottage, show the family as governed by absolute authority—not necessarily the father's.
In Dickens and Thackeray, for instance, the mother or even the grandmother may be the autocrat.

But discipline and subordination were the rule. Some of Sir William Beveridge's evidence acknowledges
"a loosening of family ties and authority," but the change is surely much more than that—it is a change of system.

Two Great Changes.

The modern family, for better or worse, relies on freedom instead of order. Whether that makes for a larger amount of happiness in the world or more efficient people does not seem as clear as we could wish.
But the change is vast.

Next to that in importance, I should have thought, was the change in the size of families. Last century most people grew up in a household of brothers and sisters, a combustible form of childhood. Now
a household of children is a rare thing,
and the boys and girls who grow up alone or in couple have a very different notion of comfort and the best way of living.

These two changes alone would make the family of to-morrow an experiment which has never been tried before.

The GLOBE TROTTER'S
DIARY.

Mr. Roosevelt's Mother.

Despite the tremendous concentration of limelight upon Mr.
Franklin Roosevelt's public and personal record, few people are aware of one of the strongest influences in his life. It is the devotion for his mother, Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt.

Mrs. Sarah Roosevelt does not seek the limelight. During the whole election campaign she kept silence. But she is known to every American as one whose force of character is as notable as her shrewdness of political judgment.

An admiring public know her as
"The Queen Victoria of America."

The Family Home.

Most charming in its simplicity
is the hospitality which she freely dispenses at the Roosevelt family home at Hyde Park—a beautiful country house near Poughkeepsie, overlooking the banks of the Hudson. The atmosphere is that of the English country house of the old days.

It was here that Mrs. Sarah Roosevelt awaited news of the long-drawn-out contest for the Democratic nomination; and Mr. Roosevelt's first act on hearing of his success was to telephone to his mother three words: "I've got it."
On Tuesday of that week, mother and candidate sat down to the polling booth arm-in-arm.

Fortunate Jersey ---

There will be many a larger
State to envy Jersey its budget,
which shows a balance of £40,000, while its income-tax is still only sixpence in the pound.

Jerseymen proper—as opposed to those who might be described as Jerseymen by economic adoption—take vast pride in their island and its independence, and in the fact that the link which binds Jersey to the country is such an ancient one.
For the King rules Jersey as Duke of Normandy and not as King of England, and much of the administration of the island harks
back to mediæval times.

Exeter College, Oxford, is closely connected with Jersey, and one knows no more enthusiastic Jersey-man than its Rector, Dr. R. R.
Maret, the anthropologist.

How It Is Done ---

A traveller who recently returned to England from Soviet Russia stated that shortly before he left a Government organ published a laudatory reference to the "Tran-ser-Makora" Shock Troops, who had increased their output by 20 per cent.

Later he spent a night in Khark-
off, and learnt how the local shock
troops had achieved their success.
They had been forced to conform to the general output increase, but the amount of material available remained exactly the same.

They acted swiftly and with determination however. And now most of the male population of Kharkoff wear trousers with one long and one short leg—and the problem is satisfactorily solved.

An Active Octogenarian ---

None of our veterans strikes a more effective compromise between their undiminished vigour and their reluctance to see old habits
and opinions fade away than Viscount Dunedin, who is 83.

More than once Lord Dunedin has said in public that except for the steam engine and the electric telegraph, most of our modern scientific devices have come into existence since he was born. But, he adds, it is an even question whether the old times were not the best.

Sing! Hair Tells Age ---

A method claimed to determine the age of a person by examination of a single hair was demonstrated before the convention of the International Association for Identification by Calvin Goddard, of the Scientific Criminal Detection Laboratory of Northwestern University.
The method depends upon the discovery that, when powerfully magnified, hair reveals a system of concentric rings something like the familiar rings of trees. It is the newest method of scientific detection and has been employed, he said, in several cases.

Searching for Remains ---

It is not easy, as the unavailing
search for a silverasket supposed to contain the remains of Princess Pocahontas has just shown, to find what is sought in the crypt of a London church.

Not even when one is sure that the looked-for object is there.

BIG NAVY SOUGHT BY AMERICANS$125 Million For U.S.
Warships.PROGRAMME FOR NEXT CONGRESS.

Washington.
Another effort by the "big navy" group in the U.S.A. to build up the U.S. Navy to the full limits of the London Treaty is foreshadowed by indications that the highest officers of the U.S. Navy Department will support at the next session of Congress a naval construction programme along the lines of the Vinson 616,000,000 dollars
($125,000,000 at par) ten year
construction plan.

The bill, which failed to be passed at the last session of Congress, provided for the construction of 120 vessels of the cruiser, destroyer, submarine and aircraft-carrier types, of which eighteen, to cost 130,000,000 dollars ($26,000,000 at par) were to be laid down immediately. If enacted by the next Session of Congress, the last ship would be completed some time in 1934, or seven years after the expiration of the Treaty of London.

It is claimed that data compiled in the office of Naval Intelligence shows that, as the situation now stands, the United States, instead of being at parity with Great Britain and a little less than one-third superior to Japan, (as provided for in the Treaty negotiated at London in 1930) would be in third place in 1936.

The statistics are held to indicate that, unless a naval construction programme is started with the least possible delay, the United States will have in serviceable destroyers less than one-fourth the British and only one-sixth the Japanese tonnage when the London Treaty lapses at midnight of December 31, 1936.

In submarines, on the same date, Japan would be three times
as strong as the United States, while the tonnage of the British Submarine Flotilla would be 17,000 tons greater than the tonnage of modern American ships of the same type.

Under the Vinson Bill the first authorisation would be for the laying down in the next fiscal year of one aircraft carrier, two light cruisers of the six-inch gun types, one destroyer leader, eight destroyers and six submarines.
The completed cost, spread over three or four years, would be 130,000,000 dollars, which is about the estimated cost of the building programme which President Hoover refuses to approve which would be to the Budget Bureau by the Navy Department, last year.

Another Canal Needed.

The closing, even temporarily,
of the Panama Canal, shows the necessity for another Central America Canal.

Since, it is added, the United States have abandoned their intention of digging a canal through Nicaragua, it would be a good idea to proceed with the British project of constructing one through Colombian Territory, making use of the Atrato River
en route.

Traffic on the Panama Canal
was temporarily suspended lately owing to a rampage (violent spate) on the Chagres River which runs into the canal at the half-way point. — Reuter.

THE COMPLEXITIES
OF LIFENEW NAMES FOR OLD FAULTS

NATIONAL CONCEIT

(By Sir John Foster Fraser.)

I AM thrilled by the complexities of life, but bored by the complexes which afflict half the people I meet. Things are not what they seem; they are quite different if we keep in mind the reaction of the complex.

There used to be a disease called kleptomania. A respectable dressed dame would be brought before a magistrate accused of pinching
mustard pots, silk stockings, scented
soap, a feather box and some silk
undies from one of the big shops.
The explanation was that the poor
dear was not responsible because she suffered from the shocking complaint of kleptomania.

The diagnosis by the defence now
is that she has "the acquisitive complex." I should say she is a common sneak thief and ought to have six weeks in quod without the option of a fine.

It is nice to have a kind heart so long as it does not dominate your silly head. It is well to fish after the real meaning of things, but it is stupid when you haul up an old-fashioned flounder to describe it by a fancy name.

If one of the bandit tribe way-
lays me in a dark street, whacks me with a stretch of lead piping and purloins my watch, I decline to be soothed by the scientific explanation
he is not really a ruffian but is the victim of "the adventurous complex."

I am no more stony-souled than my neighbour; but the modern mania to coddle criminals and explain away their blackguardly habits by a string of confounded complexes leaves me hot. No wonder
this week one of our outspoken judges commented on the fact that while prisons are being closed crime
is on the increase.

Everybody, even nations, have got what is called the superiority or the inferiority complex.

The allegation is sounded that the English have the superiority complex and the Americans the inferiority complex—or it may be the other way about—though in my wanderings I have never noticed much difference between Anglo-Saxon and American conceit, except that the Englishman always assumes his superiority, while the American always asserts his.

All folk have the complex their country is the finest on God's earth,
their men the brainiest and their girls the loveliest creatures ever born. Scots folk, for instance. But you should tell that to the Australians and then listen.

However, this national superiority complex is to be preferred to the national inferiority complex. Though a humane man, I often feel these inferiorists ought to be treated like an over-large batch of newly arrived kittens.

Marriage Complexes

The latest theory is that marriages would not be so often streaked with disasters if it were not for wretched complexes.

I suppose there are few husbands
who in their time have not banged
the door and exclaimed to themselves, "That ever I should have married a woman with so little sense!" Similarly wives, after the door has been banged, mutter, "I never thought he could have been such a brute!" This behaviourism is summed up in American divorce courts as "incompatibility of temperament."

It appears that all in the marriage garden would be lovely if it were not for the tangled weeds of complexes. Instead of young complexes starting right away practising for the ultimate picturesque Darcy and Joan tableaux, they persist in developing complexes.

"Jealous" of Children

Many other names can be applied to this mischief, but complex serves as a generic description. The word is used to cover a multitude of sins. It is a sort of bovrilised interpretation of the pious piffle that
"To know all is to forgive all!" Is it?

There is a lecturer in psychopathology, mental hygiene, and other things at London University
how has been "spreading himself"
on how complexes are chiefly to blame for unhappy marriages—Dr.
J. A. Hatfield by name.

Here is one of the complexes he gives as causing wreckage to the marimonial two-seater: "The petted little girl who goes on wanting her husband to treat her like a father,
make a pet of her and do nothing
but fondle her; and when children come she is jealous of them because she wants to be the only child in the house."

This Mothering Business

My hat, Dr. Hatfield, but you talk nonsense. There is not a little wife like that in a hundred thousand; and if there was she is not suffering from a complex but from sloppy obsession. If I know anything about the modern wife she objects to being made a pet of and her husband "do nothing but fondle her," and when children come, instead of being jealous of them she adores them. If there is any jealously about it is on the part of the husband at having to take a back seat compared with the affection
given to beloved little Horace and divine little Elvina—quelling little beats in any case!

You've got it three-parts wrong,
my learned lecturer in psycho-pathology. Where did you find in your search for the root cause of unhappy marriages that "one of the commonest complexes is that of the husband with the mother complex;
he feels the need of a mother?" Of course—let me on behalf of my sex confess it—all big, strong, healthy
men love to be mothered; personally,
I purr delightedly when I'm being fussed over. But does that smash up the happy home? Or is it because the hulking fellow does not get sufficiently treated as mamma's baby boy—perhaps because mamma
is attending to little Horace's scratched and dirty knees or wiping mishap jam from little Elvina's messy face—that he gets the complex he must go to some lady friend
where the mothering business is conducted more satisfactorily? Tuttut!

"Widows and widowers," says
Dr. Hatfield, "if their first marriage has been a failure, nearly always make a mistake in their second marriage." That is not true; but if it were true, does a man or a woman
grow a complex during an unhappy marriage so they cannot help marrying other wrong 'uns? Tut-tut a second time.

This dabble about complexes is very much in the air. "My dear,
she has a persecution complex,"
sounds more scientific than a remark that the lady alluded to has a sore head and is pestering all her friends with stories about the way
she has been treated by her in-laws.
It is a phrase which has slipped into modern conversation and is chewed by everybody who has a complex for being in the know, don't you know.

Ping Shan.
THE afternoon of January 21 was devoted to an exploration of the village of Ping Shan, and of the paddy fields and hills immediately to the north. Ping Shan is the first big village beyond Castle Peak, a short distance before Yuen Long. We were not particularly energetic that afternoon and there is consequently nothing in the nature of a walk to describe.

Only 24 different species of birds were identified, and these included the Daurian Redstart of which we saw three, and the Eastern Yellow Wagtail, a male and a female in different localities. This winter has been remarkable in that Daurian Redstarts have been very scarce. I have only seen one on the island, and in the territories this is the first record for the winter. In previous years this very beautiful bird has been noticed frequently. The male has a dark grey crown, upper back black, lower back, rump and tail rich brown, throat, cheeks and upper breast reddish brown, and under parts with prominent white patch on the primaries. The female is paler and the white patch is less noticeable. Wagtails have been particularly abundant this winter as is emphasised by our now having seen in all 5 of the rare Eastern Yellow Wagtail. Also the Japanese Robin Flycatcher has been common; on not a single expedition since November 29th have we failed to see not one or two but several of these beautiful little birds.

One warbler was identified with certainty, this was the Chinese Yellow bellied Bush-warbler, Oriopneuste euhalina. This little bird, only 4 inches long, is of a uniform brown colour above washed with olive green. It has a bright yellow supercilium and a dark brown-green trans-ocular stripe. The underparts are yellow, paler on the throat and on the centre of the abdomen; the under wing coverts are also yellow.

The Green and Red Snakes.
Since "Vinjar" and I wrote about the green snake with red on its neck, two people have kindly written to say that they remember seeing this species on the island and in the territories. Two other friends have also told me that they have seen this snake and distinctly remember its characteristic markings. We are grateful to our friends for supplying these records, all of which dealt with snakes seen in the winter, and should value exceedingly further specimens of this or of any other unusual species I hope to work under Dr. Malcolm Smith at the Natural History Museum, S. Kensington, for a part of the coming summer on the snakes of the Colony with a view to a series of illustrated articles for the Hong Kong Naturalist, as should like to have as complete a collection as possible to study.

The Local Terrapins.
The difference between a land tortoise and a fresh-water tortoise or terrapin, is that the head of the former is covered with scales whereas the head of the terrapin is covered with a smooth skin. Two species of terrapin may sometimes be found locally, one is the Gold Coin Tortoise, Cuora trifasciata, with three black lines on the back of the shell and with smooth golden skin on the top of the head. The other called Chinemys reevesi has three ridges on its back and yellow longitudinal streaks and angular marks on the sides of the head and throat. It grows to a length of 5 inches. Specimens of this species were for sale at the New Year Fair at Wanchai.

U.S. TRADE DECLINES

Still Leading Export Nation.
FALL IN PRICES.

Washington. American foreign trade declined in value during the past year to the lowest level since pre-war days. But the United States is still the world's leading export nation and is second only to the United Kingdom in import trade.

Mr. Roy D. Chapin, Secretary of Commerce, in his annual report to President Hoover, reports that exports dropped from 3,083,000,000 dollars ($616,600,000) in 1930-31 to 1,949,000,000 dollars ($389,800,000) in 1931-32—a drop of 37 per cent. Imports declined 19 per cent, dropping from 2,432,000,000 dollars ($486,400,000) to 1,731,000,000 ($346,200,000).

"Since domestic industrial production fell off 22 per cent," recorded Mr. Chapin, "it would appear that the shrinkage in foreign trade has been less than in domestic business."

"The sharp recession in prices was responsible for about three-fifths of the decline in the value of exports and four-fifths of the reduction in the value of imports." — Reuter.

CHINESE CAVE MAN ON FILMS

ROYAL SOCIETY ENTERTAINED.

Manchester. The first description of the discovery of the famous "Peking man" by a scientist engaged in the work was given to the Royal Society by Professor Davidson Black, who was made an F.R.S. before his lecture.

There was an unusual absence of technicalities in the young professor's account. Instead he treated the Royal Society to an interesting cinema show which allowed us to see the English and Chinese experts of the geological survey working away on the face of the arid limestone hill where the precious skulls were found. What the Chinese geologist, Mr. W. C. Pei, hit upon on December 4, 1929, was nothing less than a human genus, now known as Sinanthropus. The skull of this first specimen was embedded in a big block of travertine, and weeks of patient laboratory labour with delicate drills was spent in disengaging it before its amazingly primitive character was evident.

Professor Black's movie pictures allowed one to grasp at a glance how small was the brain inside the squat, ape-like, but still distinctly human skull. In the last few years the slow labour has proceeded of quarrying down through the limestone deposits that all the huge cave where Sinanthropus lived during ages inconceivably remote. Another skull has come to light and fragments of bones, including a toe bone, to which a professor has written an ode? The tracks of the cave men's for publication on Sunday, January 22. Hecatas have been revealed in fire-blackened strata, divided one from another by many feet of solid deposit, which shows that this cavern in "Chicken-bone Hill" was inhabited by primitive man for thousands of years.

Characteristics.
The evidence has been pieced together through years of study until, as Professor Black announced, it is now accepted as fairly certain that Sinanthropus "possessed a nervous mechanism for the elaboration of articulate speech." He was right-handed, and had reached the stage of making extremely rude implements of quartz, for many of these "artifacts" have been found near his fires.

It was the finding of bits of quartz on the site ten years ago that set the experts on the track. Quartz does not occur naturally in the district, and when Dr. Anderson picked up a piece in 1921 he said, "Here is primitive man. Now all we have to do is to find him." It was not until 1926 that the discovery of a fossilised human tooth made success certain.

Professor Black's pictures of the relics of "Peking man" suggested that it is impossible to imagine the existence of a creature at a lower stage of culture while being definitely human. The Chinese geologists and anatomists are now engaged on the big task of cutting right through the hill, in the expectation of uncovering many more "culture layers," with their fires and human and animal relics. They control a large number of chieftains and intelligent Chinese labourers, whose manner of life in this strange, bare country, we could study on the cinema screen to-day. — Reuter.

Its popularity in the environs of Putney and Putney will pass like the cruise for "Valencia" and that intellectual song beloved by our uncles—"Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay!"

We broad-shouldered, sane men can lean back and chuckle at the comic complexes trotting around. But there is a serious, even a dangerous, aspect of prevalent clowning with facts. We know of the lamentable consequences of unhealthy mental environments and, conscious of being sinners ourselves, can cultivate charitable concern for the lapses of others.

But do not let wickedness be explained away by finding an excuse that it is an uncontrollable complex impulse which produces most of the evil in the world.

That is a cheap and stupid philosophy, none the less stupid because it is often advanced by good-minded people. Good-minded people are not necessarily intelligent; just as there are innumerable intelligent people who are anything but good. Wrong is wrong, and should not be palliated with pseudo-scientific jargon about complexes.

The Danger
Sloppy minded talk on the saving grace of complexes is doing more harm in the world than Communist adulation of Sovietism.

If the social system is smashed it is more likely to be caused by pathological philanthropic friends than by political subversive enemies. Nasty conduct is nasty conduct, and should not be clouded by fool phrases about the complex of physical idealism. A liar is a liar without the complex of romanticism. A man who pretends when he is nothing of the kind has not the complex magnificence; he is just a common swanker.

NEW SHIP ARRIVES IN HONG KONG.

Portland-Orient Service Inaugurated.

The steamer General Pershing, first ship of the new express service between Portland, Oregon, and the Far East, inaugurated by the States S.S. Company, docked at Hong Kong yesterday. The vessel brought a considerable volume of flour, lumber and cereals for local discharge. It is carrying apples, meats, onions, celery and other perishables for Manila.

Indicative of the interest the people of Portland have in the opening of the service is the fact that more than 10,000 persons were on hand to bid the Pershing "good-bye" when it left Portland on December 28. The second vessel in the schedule, the General Sherman, is en route to Hong Kong and the third, the General Lee, will sail within the next two weeks.

The three vessels belong to the famed "White Fleet" of the United Fruit Company. All have been taken under long time charter by the States Steamship Company. Each has been renamed.

Mrs. Julia L. Meier, wife of the Governor of Oregon, rechristened the Pershing which was formerly the Heredia. General John J. Pershing congratulated the States Steamship Company and the people of Oregon in a long distance telephone hook-up between Washington, D.C. and Portland the morning the Pershing sailed.

Joseph K. Carson, Portland's newly elected mayor who will take office within a few months, is among passengers coming on the General Sherman, due two weeks hence. Mr. Carson, a young attorney, is keenly interested in development of trans-Pacific trade which accounts for his making the voyage.

Among her passengers are many notabilities, including Mr. George Bernard Shaw, who is accompanied by his wife. Other prominent people are the Rt. Hon. Earl of Cadogan, Mrs. MacFie Claude (Noel, Countess of Rothe), Princess de Ligne, Baron and Baronesse de Marwicz, Lady Beatrix Hoare, Sir Walter Preston, M.P., and Lady Preston, and Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr.

GRAF ZEPPELIN FOR ARCTIC AGAIN.

To Franz-Joseph Land Via Russia.

Berlin. The Graf Zeppelin is to embark on another Arctic flight next Summer.

Piloted by Dr. Eckener, the airship will first fly to Moscow, then pay visits to Gorki (Nijni-Novgorod), Stalingrad, Charkov, and Kiev, and from there take off for Franz-Joseph Land.

Lately Dr. Walter Bruns, the General-Secretary of the "Aero-Arctic" Company and one of Dr. Eckener's closest collaborators, has been in Moscow arranging with the Soviet authorities for the airship's journey.

Dr. Bruns accompanied the Graf Zeppelin on its former flights to the Arctic regions in 1931, and took a film of the expedition. — Reuter.

UNENDING WAR FOR WORLDLY GOODS

THE SIN OF COVETOUSNESS

(By A Local Padre.)

(This is another of the series of articles written exclusively for the "Sunday Herald" by a local Army chaplain.)

THERE are thousands of people to-day, who, while they believe that Christianity has a real and abiding gospel to preach to the world, yet are by no means sure that it's message will work under the hard and practical conditions of the days in which we live.

They admit quite frankly, that it has proved quite effective in the lives of multitudes of men and women, but it has not changed society nor prevented war. While it is sound academically, and beautifully ideal, it cannot operate successfully in the world as we know it to-day.

The question we have to face is just this:—Is it possible to live that care free life sketched by Christ when He said "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and the other things will be added unto you?"

When everything is reduced to the simplest terms, the real antagonism to the gospel centres itself into complete disbelief as to the practicability of these words being true. Men quite frankly do not believe it.

One thing is certain. The result of other methods of living have been wholly disastrous. Life has become one unholy scramble in which not always the best but the strongest, the most pushful, and the least scrupulous, have survived. The things which Christ promised should be added have become the first things for most people. Food and clothing and shelter are necessities of human life, but they have entirely filled the foreground of man's ambition, until a larder, and wardrobe, and a mansion,—always growing, have come to be regarded as the highest end of human existence. For multitudes, the main purpose in life is to obtain the best food, the best clothing, the best shelter, and the most of the best.

The Mother Sin.
It is striking to observe the emphasis which Christ placed upon covetousness as a mother sin. He knew that it led directly to most of the world's social evils. We may say what we like about the part bad politics played in forcing the Great War upon the world,—the real cause of it was covetousness. Men were after larders and markets and wardrobes, and luxuries. Second things had become first.

The Bolsheviks and Marrian socialists are well aware of this, and in their bovine way cry for the destruction of the system which has brought such misery on the world. The system that tried to run the world (as Studdert Kennedy put it), on the assumption that it was one vast hen-run, and men were the hens. There is only a certain amount of power and food, and wealth in the run, and life is a struggle to get as much of it as we can. The more we get the less there will be for other people. The more other people get, the less there will be for us.

We tried to build a world on that lie, and it perished self-destructed. And people who are neither Bolshevik nor Marrian are just as certain that the world has been on the wrong tack, and are seeking a new method of living although it is not the way of destruction.

Amid the wreckage of the modern world, the most hopeful sign we can perceive is the awakening of so many minds to the real cause of our trouble,—that we have turned from the vision of Christ as being impossible, and trodden the contrary way which has only ended in disaster.

But is Christ's way of life possible? What are the guarantees that if men live according to His way, and seek His Kingdom first, the rest will really be added?

God's Guarantee.
The only guarantee He gives is the character of God, and He stakes everything on that. The Father, He tells us is the source of all good. We have to depend on Him for all we receive. He it is Who supplies all our raw material, without which we could make nothing at all. Whether we own, or disown Him, we are His pensioners. But He never betrays us. He works for us by means of laws. Obey these laws and all is well. Seek first the Kingdom, and the other things will be added.

The modern world, however, does not believe that it is good enough. It seems so unsubstantial, nebulous and unreal. It lacks the element of "cash down." It introduces that vaporous thing, as men believe it to be—Faith.

At the last therefore the whole matter resolves itself into one question,—do we really believe in God sufficiently to risk our future on the stability of His Character? Thousands of simple souls have done it. They are happy, trustful people, who do, in all their thoughts, set His Kingdom first, and somehow the other things are always added.

The Gospel will work in the modern world if men will give it the opportunity, but so long as they place second things first it will not, and God's programme for humanity will remain unfulfilled. For it does not work magically, it can only work morally, and men are afraid to try it.

Fear is at the bottom of most of our troubles. Nations arm against each other because of fear. Our social troubles. Nations arm Men hurry to become rich for the same reason. The whole system of grab, which urges men to get as much of the world's goods as they can, is based on fear,—fear that if they fail there will be nothing left for them at the end.

Put God First.
But Christ presses the contrary to all this. He urges the child's trust, and condemns the beast's leap. "Put the Kingdom of God first," He says "Reduce all life to a single service, and the other aspects of life, personal and social, will fall into place." Society will then be organized on the lines of a Father's home, and not on the lines of an African jungle.

That great bogey fear will disappear. Inequalities will remain, but all will be happy, since in the Kingdom of the Father there will be no room for tyrannies, trickeries and wars.

A counsel of perfection, people reply with a shrug of the shoulders! But is it? We have had the counsel of destruction. What is there left but to try Christ's way, or return like fools to the blasted path upon which our feet have been burned?

SINGER TWELVE SALOON

Road Test Of 1933 Model.

SMOOTH POWER.

A recent issue of the autocar contained an account of a road test of one of the most interesting of 1933 British cars—the Singer Twelve saloon, which sells at home for the very moderate price of £199.

"In some of the most important respects, the new Singer Twelve provides much more than might be expected of its modest cost. Chief of these are the accommodation, finish and comfort of the body, and the quite remarkably smooth-running 4-cylinder engine. There would be excuse even for experienced drivers being led to believe that the engine possesses six, and not four, cylinders, as is the case, for it is not too much to say that throughout the range the engine is free from a vibration period, a slight but not at all disturbing tremor being noticeable at the lower speeds, which disappears entirely at the ordinary cruising range between 30 and 40 m.p.h.

"Higher speeds round about 50 can be held without the slightest fuss or mechanical noise. There is no doubt at all that a good power output has been obtained; and, partly due to the flexible mounting of the engine in the frame, the power impulses are not felt, giving a very pleasing effect.

"The latest Singers have the logical development that the use of silent-running, constant-mesh pinions is extended to second gear as well as third, so that there is no annoyance produced by employing either by these indirect gears, second also being a useful ratio on which a maximum reading of 35 can be reached....

"Another feature likely to prove very popular with the future owner is the lightness of control, the steering being remarkably light, yet not vague; none of the pedals needs anything but the lightest of pressure, the force it is necessary to apply to the clutch and brake being approximately equal."

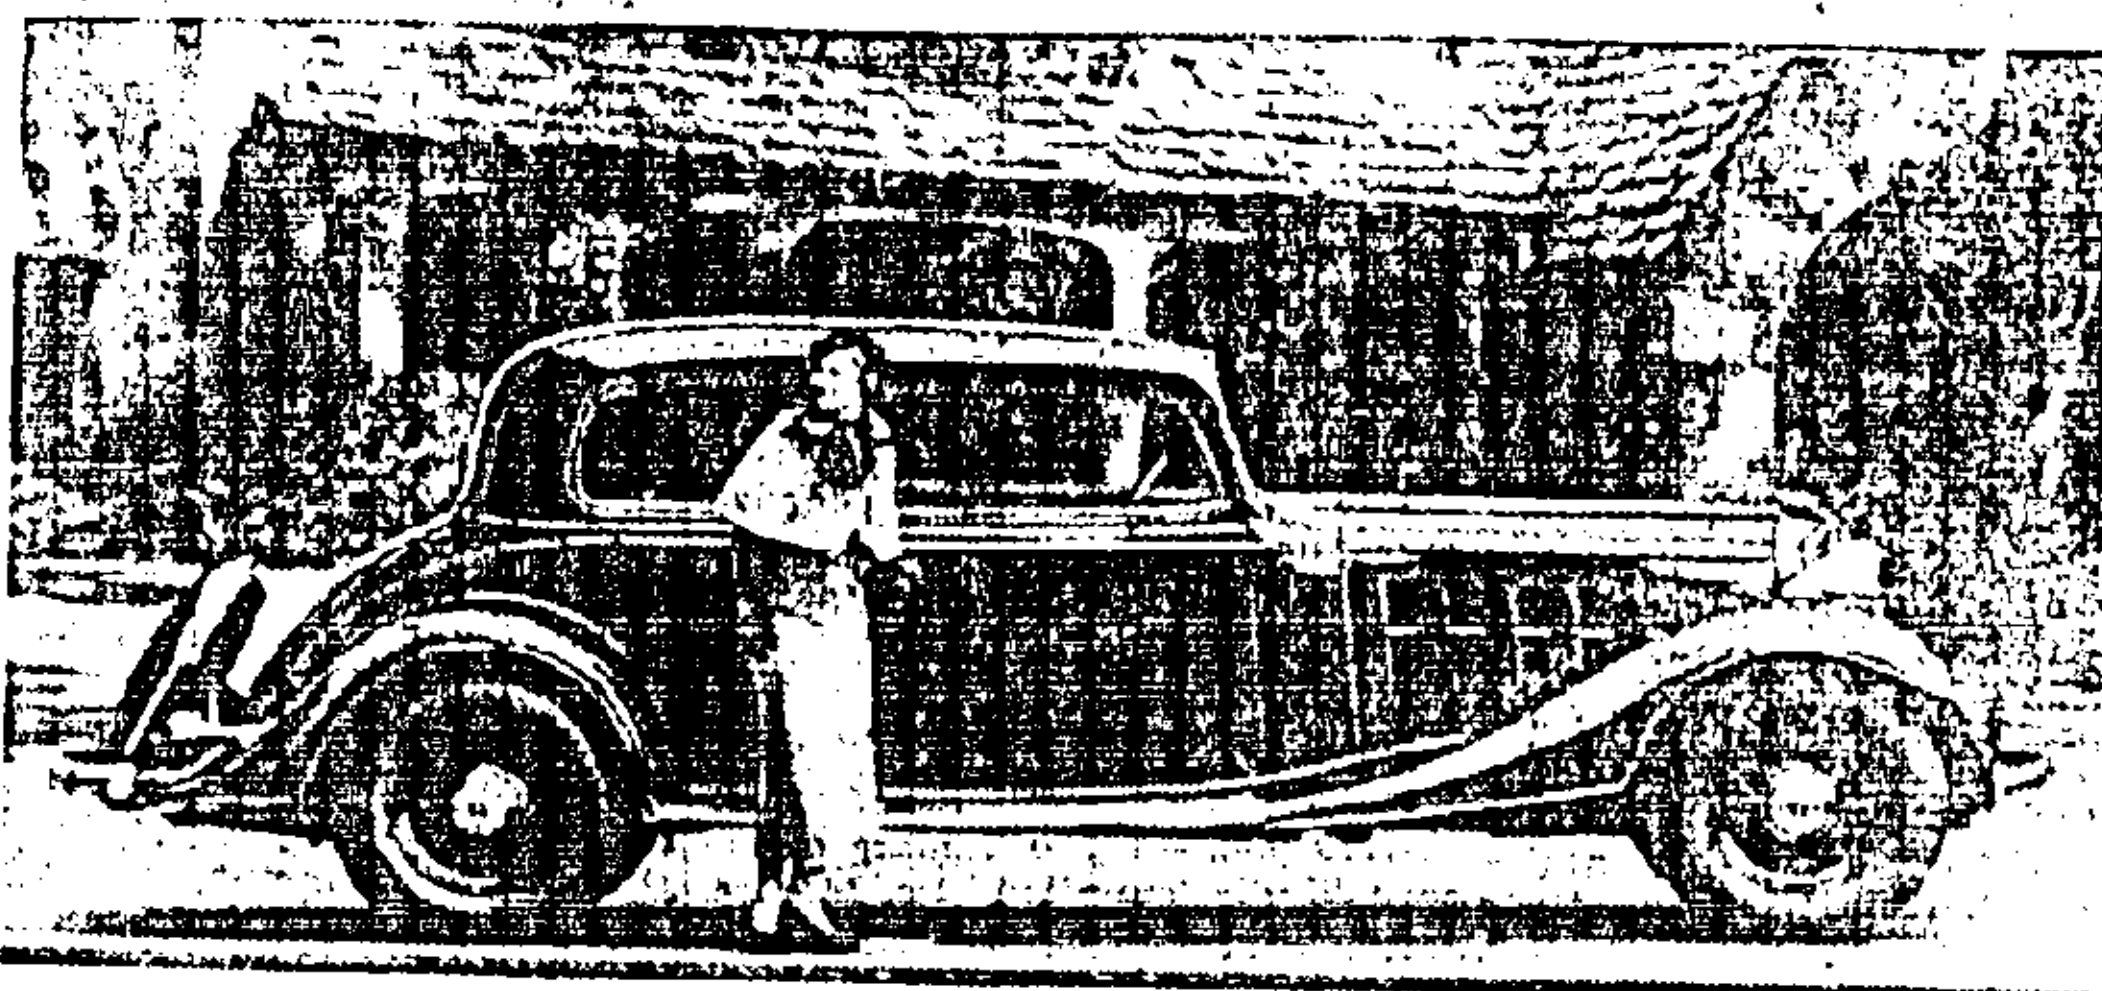

FUEL INSTEAD OF CAPACITY TAX.

So many important trade bodies have expressed themselves in favour of the fuel tax in place of the present horse-power tax that there is every possibility of this measure being adopted by the French Government at a not very distant date.

The plan has been tried out well in Algeria with satisfactory results. Under it the man whose mileage is low and is spread over two cars has an advantage. The

THE 1933 STYLE IN MOTOR CARS

1933 Buick, 138-inch wheelbase, five-passenger coupe.

FRENCH ROAD LAWS CHANGE.

To Operate From April, 1933.

On April 1, 1933, an important change will be made in the French rule of the road, thus putting an end to the uncertainty existing at the present time. Most of the national highways, and a certain number of secondary roads which have grown in importance of recent years, will be classified as "intensive traffic highways," the drivers using them having the right of way over traffic coming from other roads.

The list of priority roads has just been drawn up, but before the reform can be applied it is necessary that suitable warnings be given. These will take the form of a triangle placed on every secondary road at a point 150 yards from its junction with the main road, and also a yellow band across the road at the point where it runs into the main highway. This reform was proposed several years ago, but was rejected on account of cost. The reason for not applying the new law at once is that six months are necessary to erect signs.

The general rule where roads of equal importance intersect is to give way to traffic coming from the right. This also applies in cities. In Paris, for instance, there are no main streets, from a traffic standpoint. No matter how important the avenue over which he is travelling, the driver must give way to vehicles coming from streets on his right—"The Autocar."

SAFER CROSSINGS FOR MOTORISTS.

New Invention Said To Prove Satisfactory.

The unbarred level crossings of the United States railways, have been a source of considerable danger to motorists and other road users for many years, and, owing to the great number of crossings in the country, it has been found impossible to adopt the English system of attending crossings. This danger has been reduced very considerably by a device which has been tried out recently. It consists of a girder, or boom, into which is built a large reflecting "Stop" sign, visible by day or night. The boom is automatic in its operation, being actuated by the locomotive of the train. On approaching a crossing the engine makes a contact on the rails, thus setting into operation the hydraulic power across the road. A large bell rings as the gate shuts. Subject to further tests proving satisfactory, it is intended to erect these gates on all the main road crossings in the United States.

motorist who keeps one car and runs it hard is in a less satisfactory position. Still, one does pay taxes relative to the amount of use to which the car is put—"The Autocar."

CARS INCREASE IN BRITAIN.

Light Cars Have Most Demand.

Despite the increased price of petrol and the high premiums on insurance, the figures recently issued by the Ministry of Transport of the sales of motor-cars show that over the period from April 1 to September 30 last year the number has considerably increased as compared with the corresponding period last year.

In 1931 during that period 64,208 private motor-vehicles were sold by British manufacturers, as compared with 71,558 in 1932, an increase of 7,350. One effect of the general financial situation during the past two years has been to stimulate the sale of the small horse-power motor-car, which costs less to purchase and less for insurance and tax. In the periods mentioned above 24,960 cars up to 10 horse-power were sold in 1931, and in 1932 36,239, an increase of 11,279.

It was stated by many well-known London motor firms recently that, although there was a definite trend towards the purchase of the light car, there was still a good demand for the high-powered vehicles, but this did not include the foreign car, for which there was now little demand.

The light car trade can be said to be now at its zenith, and remarkable offers are being made to customers for these cars, which can be disposed of easily. The first questions now put to the motor salesman by a customer relate to insurance and petrol consumption. These two points will be in the near future mean much to the British motor industry.

NEW MORRIS SAFETY DEVICE.

Exclusive Direction Indicator.

Foremost among Morris' innovations for 1933 is the fitting as standard to all cars (excepting the Minor range), in conjunction with the usual foot brake-actuated rear stop lights, of flashing direction indicators of a type exclusive to Morris Motors Ltd. These take the form of three-light cluster mounted on each side of the car, forward of the windscreen.

They can be clearly seen from either front or rear, and by day as well as night. The light shows red, amber or green, according to requirements, and thus conform with the international traffic signalling code. They are controlled by a very simple universal switch at the driver's right hand.

As a time when road accidents resulting from inadequate signals are rife, these novel indicators, representing yet another Morris' pioneer feature, are already being hailed in all quarters as introducing an entirely new standard of road safety and courtesy.

LABORATORY TESTS FOR DRIVERS

Dummy Car And Pictured Road.

London. The National Institute of Industrial Psychology, which has just received a further grant of £5,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation for research work, is preparing psychological tests for motor drivers in order to determine exactly the kind of driver any individual would make.

A Press representative recently submitted himself to various tests, including eye "balance" and judging distances.

The most enjoyable, he stated, was the dummy car test. "You sit in what appears to be a replica of the driving seat of any car, save that there is no gear lever. On a screen in front of you is a coloured picture of a charming country road. You press the accelerator of your 'car,' and find yourself moving along the road. You turn the wheel and find that you can steer the car; you press the accelerator further and your car positively leaps forward. The illusion is perfect. But it is, of course the screen image and not the car that moves. I was well under way when I turned a corner, rather fast perhaps, and found a tree trunk lying across the road. I jammed on the brake and waited for the crash. It was a relief to discover that my 'car' simply floated through the tree.

"My progress, the speed at which I took the corners, how I dealt with the emergencies, and other details were all recorded on a chart and when I had completed the test I was enabled, as a special privilege, to peep round the back of the screen to see how the illusion was worked. The apparatus is unique and the mechanism is kept secret."

PARKING AT NIGHT.

Whether any regulations have been made forbidding the practice of parking cars at night on the wrong side of the road was a question asked by Sir Arthur Michael Samuel in the House of Commons. Lieutenant-Colonel Headlam replied that no regulations have been made on this subject, but he was advised that any person in charge of a car who left it on a road in a position or circumstances likely to cause danger was guilty of an offence.

During the next few months fogs are likely to be of frequent occurrence in England and in such circumstances it is particularly important that cars should not be left with their lights facing the traffic. Even on a clear night such cars are likely to muddy other road users, but in a fog or mist a parked car facing the wrong way may be actively dangerous, thus laying the driver open to prosecution—"The Autocar."

You can expect a thrill at the motoring pleasure afforded in De Soto by the combination of Floating Power, Free Wheeling, Constant Mesh Transmission with Silent Gear Selector, Safety-Steel Body, Hydraulic Brakes with Centrifuge Drums, Fully Automatic Clutch, and other outstanding features.

"STYLE," as applied to the Packard, has always meant something more.

Associated with it, logically and distinctively, is the other important word, "enduring"—a Packard characteristic for a third of a century.

So gradually and correctly has Packard style evolved—like the slow unfolding of a beautiful flower—it has never been at the mercy of that capricious mood which too often alienates to-morrow's style from that of to-day.

BRIDGE NOTESWHEN TO BID

By John Darrack.

The call which beyond all others seems to better Contract Bridge players is that of One No Trump. It used to be the same at Auction, where One No Trump could mean anything or nothing, but where in response it nearly always was taken to mean a denial of partner's suit. My own initial One No Trump at Auction was always an invitation to my partner to declare a suit.

Now at Contract the opening bid of One No Trump is much more definite. It is understood that:

(I) A player holding 2½-3½ honour tricks will make an opening bid of One.

(II) If his 2½-3½ honour tricks include a biddable suit (i.e. four to 1½ honour tricks, five to half an honour trick, any six) he will bid one of that.

(III) If his 2½-3½ honour tricks do not include a biddable suit he will bid One No Trump.

I will go further. The first or second caller must bid if he has 2½ honour tricks when invulnerable, or 3 honour tricks when vulnerable. A similar obligation rests on the third or fourth caller if he has 3 or 3½ honour tricks respectively.

Thus an obligation to bid rests on South who deals and picks up:

 HEARTS: K X X
 DIAMONDS: X X X
 CLUBS: X X X X

and all he can call is One No Trump.

I remember East, the last caller, being vulnerable, passing after three No Bids on four honour tricks.

They were:

 HEARTS: A K
 DIAMONDS: X X X X
 CLUBS: X X X X

East's excuse was that West had not three honour tricks and his hand without such support did not look as if it would be of much value.

There again it was East's bounden duty to call, and his call must of necessity be One No Trump.

Here then is a table in which I have sought to bring the initial No Trump bid into line with corresponding suit declarations. I am assuming for the moment the Two Club and the Strong Two Conventions.

It is understood that when I refer to a biddable suit I mean:

(I) Four cards to at least 1½ honour tricks, i.e. to at least A, Q, or K Q J.

(II) Five cards to at least ½ an honour trick, i.e. to at least K or Q J 10.

(III) Any six.

This will do for the time being. I will revert to the subject of biddable suits in a later article.

You must bid:

1st or 2nd vulnerable
 3rd or 4th at any time holding Under 3½ Under 2½ 2½-3½
 4-4½
 5 or over

With biddable suit in hand
 No bid
 1 of suit
 2 of suit
 2 Clubs

Without biddable suit in hand
 No bid
 1 No Trump
 2 No Trumps

The Public is cordially invited to attend the service and visit the Reading Room.

Now let us tabulate response bids. These of course are more varied and more difficult to reduce to a system. They will be the same whether vulnerable or not.

Holding Responding to 1½-2 Initial bid of 2½-3 One
 3½-4 No Bid
 over 4½ One No Trump

Responding to Initial bid of
 Two No Trumps Two Clubs
 Three No Trumps Two No Trumps

Usually, however, at Contract, as at Auction, the response of One No Trump is interpreted as a denial of partner's suit and is not made if the response bidder holds three of partner's suit to at least the Queen of any four.

The same principle is usually extended to cover responses on higher honour trick values. Personally I do not favour this custom, least of all for the higher values.

A response of Two No Trumps to a call of, say, One Heart, means very definitely 2½ Honour Tricks. Whereas a response of three Hearts might not mean any honour tricks at all.

e.g. a response of Three Hearts according to the argument might be made on:

SPADES: A X X
 HEARTS: Q X X
 DIAMONDS: A K X X
 CLUBS: X X X

or

SPADES: X
 HEARTS: X X X X X
 DIAMONDS: K X X
 CLUBS: Q X X

In effect, in raising partner's suit the nature of the support, is not adequately indicated, while it is very definitely published by the switch into No Trumps.

THE HONG KONG C.C., KOWLOON C.C., THE POLICE AND THE R.E. & S. SIGS. RECORDED VICTORIES IN THE SECOND DIVISION OF THE CRICKET LEAGUE YESTERDAY. THERE WERE NO PREMIER LEAGUE GAMES.

H. J. Armstrong (58) and L. D. Kilbee (54) added 111 runs for the second Club wicket against the Recreo, and were largely responsible for the home team's declaration at 183 for 7. H. A. Alves claimed 5 of these wickets for 45 runs. The Recreo, however, were unable to cope with the Club's well-varied attack and were dismissed for 104 to which J. E. Noronha contributed an invaluable 53.

Spr. Tucker, the Army fast bowler, gave the R.E. & Sigs. a seven wickets victory when he dismissed the Navy for 44 runs, his personal "bag" being 6 for 29. G. R. Wynne, who shares with M. B. Mitchell the distinction of scoring a League century this season, contributed 58 to the Police total against the University and helped in no small measure towards his side's victory by three wickets.

The Artillery were heavily defeated by Kowloon for whom H. Overy was in magnificent form. He took 7 for 25 to dismiss the visitors for 77, and C. I. Stapleton (55) and N. A. E. Mackay (37) gave the K.C.C. a nine wickets triumph by adding 88 runs in an undefeated second wicket partnership.

"TOM BROWN OF CULVER."

"TOM BROWN OF CULVER" Is Unusual Film.

Unique Story of Character Development Also Contains Thrilling Military Scenes.

Novelty rules this season's pictures and here is one of the most unusual of them all.

What is said to be one of the most interesting and novel screen plays of the current season will be shown at the Central Theatre beginning to-day. The picture is "Tom Brown Of Culver," the Universal production which presents Tom Brown and Slim Summerville in the leading roles, and was filmed partly at Universal City and partly at the famous Culver Military Academy in Indiana. The entire story is told against the background of this well known institution, and is said to tell a most dramatic story of a boy whose father was erroneously credited with being a hero of the world war.

A noteworthy feature of "Tom Brown Of Culver," is the fact that not a girl appears in it—and yet, it is said, the story is not lacking in intense "heart interest." The list of players appearing with Brown, Warner and Summerville, includes Richard Cromwell, Sidney Toler, Russell Hopton, Andy Devine, Kit Guard, Willard Robertson, Ben Alexander, and other screen favourites. The picture was directed by William Wyler.

TOM BROWN.

It was a break for Tom Brown, young nineteen-year-old star of "Tom Brown Of Culver," showing to-day at the Central Theatre, to have his name used in the first production in which he was starred. Tom began his theatrical career eighteen years ago, and has been consecutively a well-known figure on the stage, silent screen, the radio and in the talkies.

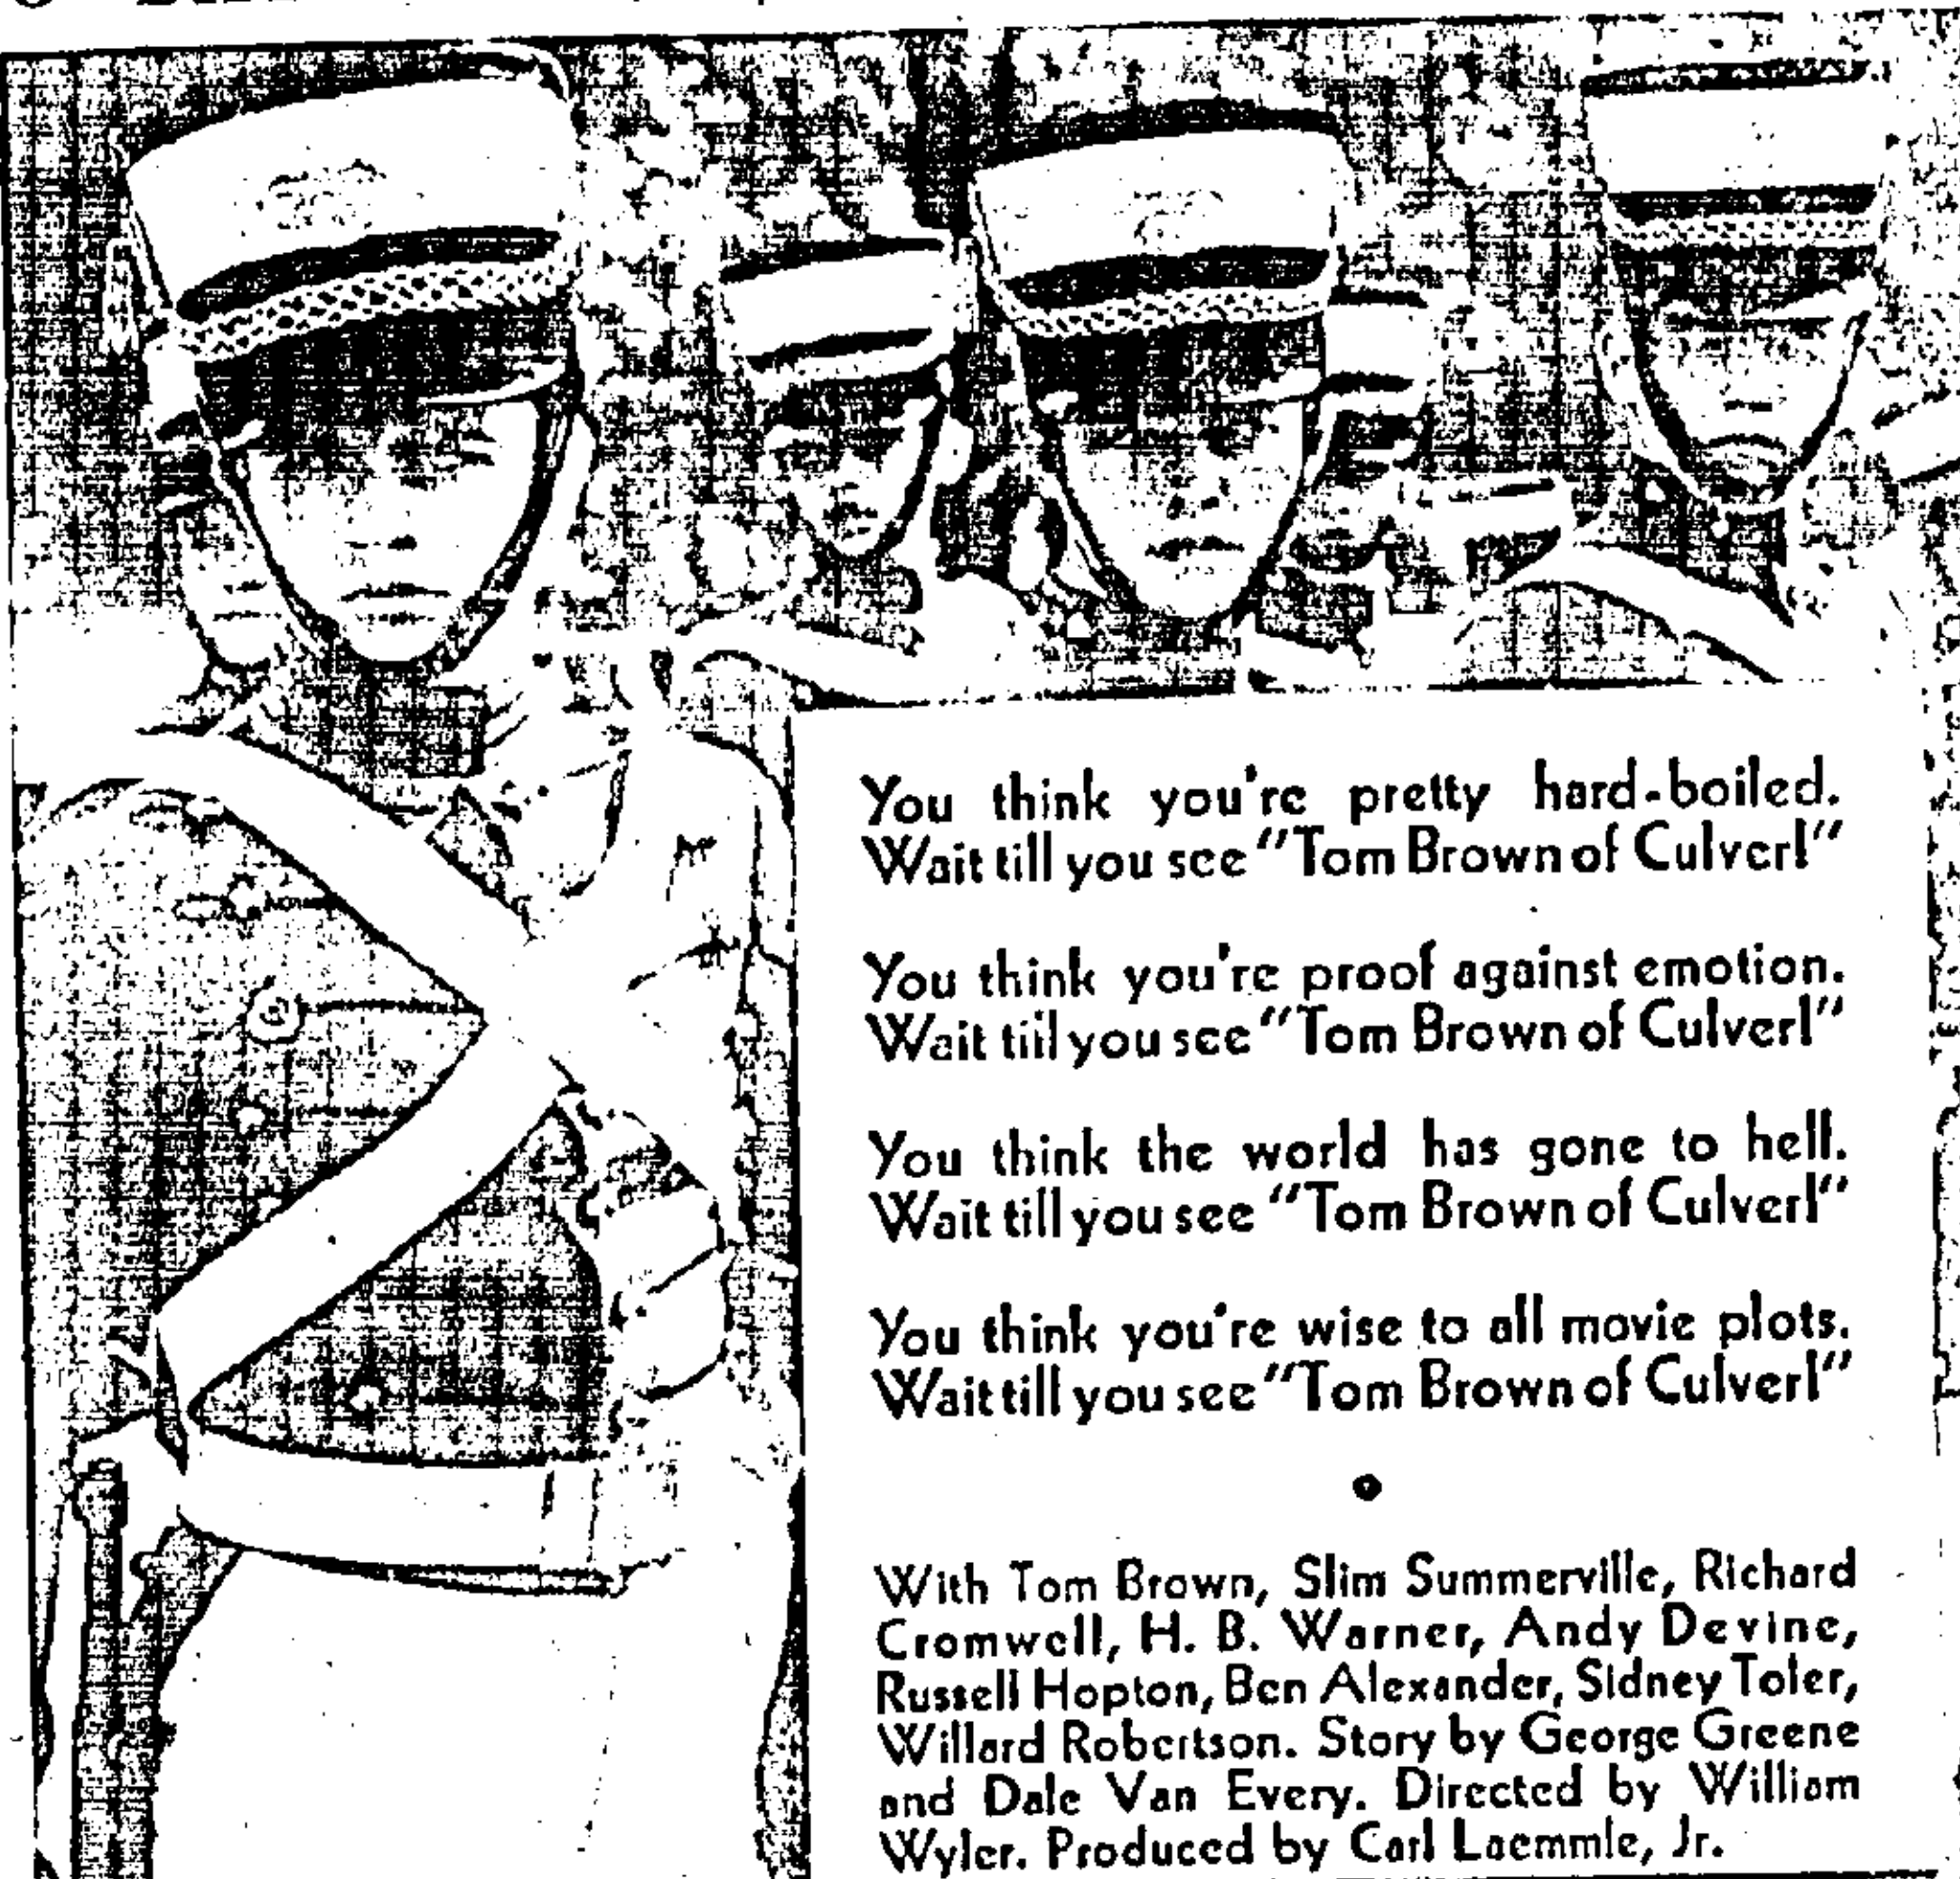

H. B. WARNER.

H. B. Warner, plays an important role in "Tom Brown Of Culver," began his career on the London stage. He went to the United States in 1905, made his first appearance with Eleanor Robson, and immediately established himself as one of the important figures of the American stage, and later of the screen. He is best remembered on the stage for his "Alma Jimmy Valentine," and on the screen for "King Of Kings" and "Sorrell and Son."

SLIM SUMMERVILLE.

Slim Summerville will soon celebrate his twenty-fifth year in moving pictures. He was one of the original Keystone Cops and the first extra ever to be given a contract. He was born in Albuquerque, New Mexico. "All Quiet On The Western Front" brought a desultory career into sharp focus and since that time he has been getting a star's salary and more work than any player on the screen. He will be seen in "Tom Brown Of Culver."

TO-DAY AT 11.30, 2.30, 5.15, 7.15 & 9.30 P.M.

You think you're pretty hard-boiled.
Wait till you see "Tom Brown of Culver!"

You think you're proof against emotion.
Wait till you see "Tom Brown of Culver!"

You think the world has gone to hell.
Wait till you see "Tom Brown of Culver!"

You think you're wise to all movie plots.

With Tom Brown, Slim Summerville, Richard Cromwell, H. B. Warner, Andy Devine, Russell Hopton, Ben Alexander, Sidney Toler, Willard Robertson. Story by George Greene and Dale Van Every. Directed by William Wyler. Produced by Carl Laemmle, Jr.

PRESENTED BY CARL LAEMMLE

"YOUNG BRIDE."

Five popular screen names head the cast of "Young Bride," a story of a girl's unselfish love and a wayward youth's regeneration, which comes to the Central Theatre on next change.

Helen Twelvetees, brilliant star of "Millie" and "Her Man," Eric Linden and Arline Judge, romantic team of "Are These Our Children?" Roscoe Ates and Cliff Edwards are the quintette of favourites in this RKO-Radio picture.

The highly entertaining story concerns a beautiful and cultured girl who hungers for romance, ended her in her prosaic situation of librarian's assistant. Meeting the handsome sheik of a cheap dance hall, she is blinded by the glamour of his vivid talk of far-away places and big business deals. Mistaking the sheik for reality, she surrenders to her longings for romance, only to meet disillusion and face a desperate struggle for happiness.

All the resources of the combined RKO Studios were bent toward making this production an outstanding contribution to the season's cinematic output. Imposing settings, including the interior of a first class Atlantic City Hotel, a typical New York taxi-dance hall, a public library and a complete Hudson River steamboat were erected. The ranks of Hollywood's talent were combed fine to secure the best available players for the hundreds of atmospheric roles and the expert direction of William Seiter was provided.

In the picture Helen Twelvetees has what is said to be her most dramatic role as a demure but love-hungry assistant librarian who is swept away by the romantic glamour of a handsome dance-hall sheik. Linden plays the part of the boy, and Miss Judge has the role of a sexy siren who attempts to lure him to his destruction.

PUBLIC LIBRARY RENDERS SERVICE TO CAUSE OF LOVE.

As a contributor to the great cause of romance, the public library has a record as imposing as those of moonlit river banks and tree shrouded parks. In fact, the library has a decided advantage over its rival as a trysting place for eager lovers, because of the many legitimate excuses that can be found for going there.

The girl whose parents would never think of allowing her to go on a joy ride, can always get away to take a book back to the library, and it is the most natural thing in the world for students to do their research work there. What happens after the book has been returned and the research work completed is a different matter.

This phase of the library's service to love-hungry humanity is pictured in "Young Bride," RKO-Radio's heart interest drama with Helen Twelvetees, which is to be shown at the Central Theatre on next change. In it, a romance which has its inception in the quiet halls of a public library is traced through its turbulent course in moving, powerful fashion.

Miss Twelvetees takes the part of a beautiful young assistant librarian who meets a handsome sheik from a cheap dance hall.

RALPH LYNN & TOM WALLS IN "THARK."

Dominions Production.

The mere announcement of the fact that Ralph Lynn, Tom Walls and other of the Aldwych players are to be seen in a new farce comedy is sufficient to suggest good entertainment. Once again it is a screen version of one of Ben Travers' plays. In the past these were good enough to put the Central Theatre on the "theatre map," so good in fact that the theatre gained a reputation as the home of comedy. "Thark" is the new picture which will be shown at the Central Theatre next week, and in addition to Lynn-Walls combination, dear old Mary Brough and Robertson Hare play their original parts, together with two newcomers in Evelyn Bostock and Joan Brierley.

"Thark" is scheduled for showing at the Central Theatre next week. This Aldwych farce by Ben Travers is first-rate entertainment and Ralph Lynn and Tom Walls give the ludicrous happenings in a haunted room the reality of actualities. A certain room in Thark Manor is said to be haunted. Ralph Lynn, in fear and trembling, promises his sweetheart that he will lay the ghost. Force of circumstances gives him Tom Walls as a bedfellow, and a full-toned thunderstorm adds to the distractions of the night. All that happens is capable of explanation but not in the dead of the night, and the whole picture is immensely funny. "Thark" packed the New Gallery Theatre in London for weeks, for days there being queues for the matinee. You must see "Thark."

After finishing college in China,
he studied at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and then at the Royal Academy School, London.
He also studied at France. He studied under Sir George Clausen, R.A., who is now over 80 years of age, and was for a year a pupil of Mr. Walter Sickert, R.A., who was much in the limelight recently with his paintings of "The Raising of Lazarus" and a portrait of King George.

Chinese Art.
In an interview with a Sunday Herald reporter, Mr. Chiu said he thought Hong Kong was a beautiful place, and was "like Switzerland without snow." The scenery here, he said, was magnificent.

When asked about Chinese art of the present day, Mr. Chiu said that he had not seen enough to give an opinion. "From what I have seen, though, the works are very good. There are many fine Chinese artists in Shanghai, Peking and Tientsin."

Sickert's Works.
Speaking of the works of Mr.
Walter Sickert, Mr. Chiu said,
Sickert was a great impressionist.
His paintings were not to be judged by the subject but by their quality. "In France, Sickert is admired as the greatest British artist," said Mr. Chiu. "But in London, he is only admired by a small group, and the majority have yet to get used to his paintings."

Mr. Sickert, said Mr. Chiu, is one of the most modern of artists.
His recent portrait painting of King was an excellent study, but it was not accepted by the Academy, because it lacked dignity.

"Mr. Sickert is a painter who does not care, and paints a person exactly as he sees him."
Mr. Chiu does most of his works in oils. He explained that water colour pictures were very limited
at the Academy, and oil paintings were more ambitious.

A whole "town" is being

It is called Wye River, and consists of 20 houses which were built by a timber company. This this district some years ago, and the Trust acquired the property.

The Trust say, "We should like to see the town turned into a tourist centre." — Reuter.
